STASSEN TAKES NEBRASKA LEAD

Air Power Fund Gets Approval Of House Group

Russia Is Believed Building Huge Fleet

WASHINGTON, April 13 (AP)—A House Committee stamped a quick "okay" today on a request or $2,376,100,000 for the new air power as Capitol Hill heard that Russia is building the world's greatest air force.

Meantime the House Armed Services Committee was in its second day of hearings for a draft bill, but in the Senate, where the Armed Services Committee was writing its legislation after two weeks of hearings, work bogged down temporarily.

Chairman Gurney (R-SD), chairman of the Senate Group, said the committee voted unanimously for a top age limit of 25 years on any required registration under the proposed draft and universal military training program, but that futher action was delayed by lack of a report from Defense Secretary Forrestal and joint chiefs of staff on air power needs.

Gurney said no more closed sessions will be held before Friday, and no other major decisions can be reached.

The announcement that Russia is building a giant air force was the second revelation in two days of Soviet progress. Yesterday Forrestal told the House that Russia knows how to make the atomic bomb but does not yet have the industrial ability to make it.

Air Secretary Symington told the House Armed Services Committee today that Russia is building the greatest air arm in the world and added:

"They seem to want to reach a decision with us and they want to reach it in the air."

He said they are building 12 times as many planes as we are.

Testifying on draft legislation, he said he believed an air force of 70 groups is more important than universal military training.

He said the air arm favors the draft, but mainly because the Army needs it. He said the air force could get all the men it needed through volunteers.

"As you know, we once had to stop our (volunteer) recruiting because we had all the men for whom we had money," he said.

Symington said the 70-group program calls for buying 1,312 war planes this year, and a total of 2,174 by July 1, 1950. He said he did not think production controls, such as allocation of steel, are needed to get the planes. Forrestal yesterday said this may be necessary later, but not now.

The Draft Bill now before the House Committee would authorize a draft to boost the armed forces to 1,944,000 men, about 559,500 more than they now have. It also provides for a 70-group air force instead of today's 55.

The House Appropriations Committee quickly approved the request for $2,376,100,000 to dip into next year's military funds for an emergency warplane and guided missile program.

The money under the new plan would merely be available for immediate spending. There was no indication how many planes it would buy.

Here is how it is earmarked:

Air forces: $1,223,100,000 new spending, including $358,100,000 cash and $865,000,000 in contract authority, plus $250,000,000 new cash to pay off previous contract authorizations.

Naval aeronautics: $753,000,000 new spending, including $165,000,000 new cash and $588,000,000 in contract authority, plus $150,000,000 new cash to pay off previous contract authorizations.

The cash for new spending includes $1,140,000,000 for plane buying, $10,300,000 for purchase of controlled missiles, and $72,800,000 for other projects.

For the navy $738,700,000 is for plane buying, $9,300,000 for pilotless aircraft and $5,000,000 for other projects.

Hoffman Resigns As Studebaker President

NEW YORK, April 13 (AP)—Paul G. Hoffman today resigned his $96,000-a-year job as president of the Studebaker Corporation to head the European Recovery Program at approximately one-fifth as much.

The action was announced following a meeting of the board of directors of the corporation.

Fresh Shooting Outbursts Heard In Bogota As Plan To Renew Caucus Is Voted

'HE' IS 'SHE'—Sought by police on charges of passing bad checks, Charles H. Largey was found working as an elevator operator in San Francisco, Cal. "He" turned out to be Miss Billie Larue, 36, a two-time loser who is out on parole from Tehachapi Women's Prison. Miss Larue said "when I'm not in prison, I dress as a man."

Public Works Unit Begins Cleaning Up

BOGOTA, Colombia, April 13 (AP)—Fresh outbursts of shooting were heard outside the United States Embassy late today soon after it was voted to resume the Pan-American conference in this revolt-battered capital.

The nature of the new outbreak of gunfire was not determined immediately. The Colombian Army has been in complete control of Bogota all day and the shooting was the first heard anywhere in the city during the day.

The shooting phase of the Colombian revolution, which claimed about 300 lives and left the commercial and shopping centers of most of the nation's cities wrecked, was believed generally to have been over.

The gunfire was heard immediately after it was announced that the chief delegates of the 21 nations at the conference voted to renew their sessions tomorrow in rubble-strewn Bogota.

The action was in accord with conference sentiment to continue the meeting in order to show the Communists "they can't kick us out."

Romulo Betancourt, chief delegate from Venezuela, said the delegates approved his motion to continue the conference in the Colombian capital.

Cleanup Task Begins

The Colombian government charged its Public Works Engineers with the task of cleaning up the wreckage of last week's attempted revolution which U. S. Secretary of State Marshall said stemmed from the forces of international Communism.

Hundreds of citizens came out on the streets to go to the jobs they left when the revolution erupted Friday in a savage outburst of killing, looting and arson.

Bogota and the rest of the country are trying to clean up the mess left by rioters who looted, sacked and burned here and in many other cities.

Bogota is semi-destroyed. Hardly a public building, store or church escaped damage but the residential areas were virtually untouched.

Whole blocks in the heart of the city are in ruins with only walls standing. Industry and business are paralyzed. The position of organized labor, penetrated by the Communists, still is not clear.

Diplomatic Relations Confusing

The situation in respect to diplomatic relations with Russia is confusing. Yesterday the government radio announced three times that Colombia had severed diplomatic relations with Russia. Today a member of the Presidential secretariat said the cabinet had not yet aproved the decree for severing relations. The government said it had arrested a number of Communists, including two Russian agents.

Carlos Lozano, chief Colombian delegate to the conference, said the capitol building — site of the meeting — would be ready for occupancy by Saturday.

It was possible the conference may resume tomorrow with a ceremony honoring Simon Bolivar, South American liberator. Funeral services for Jorge Elicier Gaitan, liberal leader whose assassination touched off the revolt, are scheduled for then also at the capitol building.

Non-Commie Oath Clause In Labor Law Is Upheld

Court Splits 2-1 In Provision Rule

WASHINGTON, April 13 (AP)—A special Federal Court today upheld a provision of the Taft Hartley Labor Law which denies the privileges of the National Labor Relations Board to unions whose officers decline to swear they are not Communists.

The court split 2 to 1 in ruling the provision constitutional.

The majority said that Communism is a menace to the United States and to a Democracy and Congress had the right to seek to bar Communists from positions of labor leadership.

Uphold Other Clauses

The court, in the same case, unanimously upheld two other Taft-Hartley act sections which require unions to register annual financial statements and other data with the Labor Department.

The decision will be appealed to the Supreme Court, attorneys for the National Maritime Union (CIO) announced.

(Another decision of wide labor interest was announced today by the National Labor Relations Board. It ruled that employers must bargain with workers on pension or retirement pay plans. Some employers had contended pensions are outside the scope of compulsory collective bargaining.)

"To combat the Communist program, Congress at the request of the President is even now in the course of appropriating billions of dollars," the majority opinion of the federal court said.

"This court is asked to strike down as unconstitutional an arm of protection raised by congress against an assault upon our form of government which the constitution was provided to secure.

"In view of the avowed purpose of both the Wagner Act and the Taft-Hartley act to bring about a peaceful solution of labor quarrels, and the discernible purpose of the Communist Party to foment strikes and industrial disorders, Congress could well conclude that persons occupying key positions in the administration of labor laws should not be subject to conflicting loyalties or interests.

Bogota Prisoners Escape In Revolt

(This is a pooled dispatch from correspondents in Bogota, Colombia, received at Washington through the State Department.)

BOGOTA, April 13. (AP)—An estimated 3,000 prisoners, some serving long terms, escaped from the Modelo and Picito Penitentiaries during the height of the revolution, it was learned today.

Some Communist leaders here were arrested in a raid last night, it was reported meanwhile, but the top local Communist, Gilberto Viera, has been seen on the streets.

There is still great mystery about Colombia's delay in formalizing a break with Russia, which was announced by the government radio, with a decree being promised later. No decree has yet been published and no more mention of a break has been made on the radio since early yesterday.

Delegates to the disrupted Inter-American conference began at 2 P. M. (EST) a session at which they were expected to adopt a formal resolution expressing their determination to continue their meeting here.

The food situation remains a difficult one in the city. A survey of food supplies showed only limited quantities available and those being rationed by the army. People were lining up to buy what they could get.

Some public markets reopened on a small scale selling stocks they had on hand before the revolution. Despite army assurances that the roads to Bogota were clear, very little food was coming in from the countryside except small amounts of meat and milk.

Some grocery store prices jumped from 50 to 200 per cent over pre-revolution levels despite government threats to punish speculators. A food crisis is expected next week.

Curbs On Rail Service Lifted As Strike Ends

Lewis Will Face Contempt Charge

WASHINGTON, April 13 (AP) — The government today lifted all restrictions on railroad service imposed as a result of the coal strike, and thousands of miners returned to work after a month's idleness. But John L. Lewis still must go on trial tomorrow on a contempt of court charge.

Coal burning railroads had been made to cut their service 25 per cent, and a second 25 per cent cut was due to take effect Thursday. The orders were suspended as of 4 p. m. (EST) today by the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Office of Defense Transportation "until further notice."

May Resume Restrictions

The wording implied that the restrictions might be put back if coal production doesn't begin building up the railroads' stockpiles.

Lewis' United Mine Workers, who walked out in a dispute over pensions, turned up at some mines today in substantial numbers. However, the back-to-work movement was far from complete in the soft coal fields.

In some of the diggings, production was estimated at 75 per cent of normal, but in other areas the miners were waiting for the outcome of Lewis' trial tomorrow before Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough.

The contempt of court charge is based on the contention that Lewis and his union ignored a restraining order issued by Federal Judge Matthew F. McGuire on April 3, telling the miners to go back to work.

Lewis' attorneys argued that he fulfilled the order yesterday by calling off the strike. The government contends that since McGuire's order called for ending the strike "forthwith," Lewis and the union have been in contempt since receiving the order formally on April 5.

Lewis faced Judge Goldsborough in late 1946 on another contempt charge. Goldsborough fined Lewis $10,000 and the United Mine Workers $3,500,000. The Supreme Court later reduced the union's fine to $700,000, but let Lewis' stand.

Two other legal questions come up before Judge Goldsborough tomorrow.

The union has moved to wipe out McGuire's original order on the ground it imposes "involuntary servitude." And the government has asked an injunction under the Taft-Hartley Labor Law to replace the temporary restraining order now in effect. The Taft-Hartley Law allows federal courts to enjoin strikes for as long as 80 days in cases of national emergency.

Agree On Settlement

Lewis called off the walkout yesterday after he and Senator Bridges (R-NH), a majority of the board of trustees administering the Miners' Welfare and Retirement Fund, agreed on a settlement of the pension dispute. Ezra Van Horn, oper-

U. S. Soldiers Are Reported In Bogota

BUENOS AIRES, April 13. (AP)—Argentine Sen. Alberto Durand said today United States soldiers guarded refugees from mobs in Bogota and exchanged shots with rioters.

Durand, a member of the Argentine Delegation to the Pan-American Conference in Bogota, returned by plane this afternoon.

(There was no immediate explanation of the presence of United States troops in the Colombian capital.)

WASHINGTON, April 13. (AP) — State Department officials said today they have no information of any American troops in Bogota.

There are American officers assigned to the embassy and to a military mission in Colombia. But officials said they found it impossible to believe that any American military men would have fired shots during the Bogota rioting.

INCENTIVE TO WORK--It was back to work yesterday for thousands of West Virginia coal miners, but in the case of C. F. Clemons, Beckley, W. Va., employed at the Western Gas and Fuel Association, Helen, W. Va., there was a triple incentive. Mrs. Myrtle Clemons, his wife, gave birth to triplets just before the mine holiday ended. They have seven other children.

Employers Must Discuss Pensions, NLRB Rules

Decision May Go To Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, April 13 (AP) — The National Labor Relations Board ruled today in a 4-1 decision that the Taft-Hartley Act requires employers to bargain about pensions if their employes ask them to.

The board found the Inland Steel Company guilty of refusing to bargain with the CIO Steelworkers Union. It ordered the company to discuss pension changes with the union, provided the union's officers file non-Communist oaths within 30 days.

But the decision goes beyond this case.

Unless overthrown in the courts, the ruling brings the whole subject of pension or retirement plans within the scope of compulsory bargaining.

Applies To All Companies

It applies to all companies in interstate commerce where a union is the recognized bargaining agent of the workers. And it applies whether or not a pension plan now exists in a plant.

Ernest S. Ballard, an attorney representing Inland Steel, said the company will ask a U. S. Court of Appeals to set aside the board's decision. The case may wind up in the Supreme Court.

The duty to bargain collectively, as defined in the law, means meeting at reasonable times and conferring in good faith with respect to wages, hours, and "other terms and conditions of employment."

It does not mean that either party is compelled to agree to a proposal or make a concession.

Some employers have contended that neither the Taft-Hartley Act nor its forerunner, the Wagner Act, required them to talk with unions about such issues as pension plans.

The four-man majority held today:

1. That pension payments are a form of "wages."

2. That the terms under which pensions are to be paid, such as the age of retirement, come within the meaning of "conditions of employment."

The majority held, therefore, that Inland not only must talk about

Russia Rejects Trieste Caucus

LONDON, April 13 (AP)—The Moscow Radio said tonight Russia had rejected as "unacceptable" a proposal of the United States, Britain and France for a four-power conference to consider the return of Trieste to Italy.

The broadcast said the Russian note was delivered today to London, Paris and Washington.

The Moscow radio quoted the note as saying that Trieste was created a free city by the Italian peace treaty, which was prepared by the Big Four Council of Foreign Ministers and signed by 21 nations.

Revising such a document by means of "correspondence or by convening private conferences" not only is unacceptable but violates the "elemental principles of Democracy," the note said.

The U.S., France and Britain had proposed a meeting of the "powers principally concerned" at Paris early in May.

Militia Sought For Palestine

LAKE SUCCESS, April 13. (AP)—The United Nations Palestine Partition Commission declared tonight military forces must be sent to Palestine to avert chaos after May 15.

In a report to the extraordinary general assembly which meets in New York Friday, the five-member commission warned that these forces would be needed urgently regardless of what the assembly decides to do about the partition project.

"The steadily deteriorating situation in Palestine," the commission said, "leads to the inescapable conclusion that, in the absence of forces adequate to restore and maintain law and order in Palestine following the termination of the mandate, there will be chaos, starvation, widespread strife, violence and bloodshed in Palestine, including Jerusalem."

The commission also reported it had been handicapped by the refusal of the Security Council to provide either military support or guidance, as recommended by the assembly.

"The refusal of the mandatory power (Britain) to co-operate in implementing the plan, its rejection of any progressive transfer of authority, and the inability of the commission to be in Palestine, constitute a serious jeopardy to the discharge of the commission's responsibilities," the report said.

Judge Nullifies "Gambling" Debt

BALTIMORE, April 13 (AP)—Judge Joseph Sherbow ordered an investigation today of the case of a bettor who testified that henchmen of a bookmaker beat him up when he defaulted on his gambling debts.

Declaring that "strong armed methods are not going to be condoned in this community," Judge Sherbow ruled null and void a deed of trust obtained by the bookmaker from the man as security for a $1,900 debt.

"I thought the era of never giving a sucker an even break went out with prohibition, but I have seen it reenacted in this case," the judge said.

The suit was filed by Harry H. Levick on grounds he was "coerced" into signing a deed of trust for his 24 garages, valued at $22,000 or more.

Levick brought the suit against Bernard Freedman, who admitted in court he had been convicted of bookmaking and that he had taken bets from Levick.

Freedman denied in the civil suit that the deed of trust had covered gambling debts. He said the $1,900 represented personal loans he had made to Levick.

In invalidating the deed, Judge Sherbow pointed out that under its terms Freedman would have received the garages if Levick had defaulted on payments of the $1,900.

Levick testified during the proceedings that two "henchmen" of Freedman's asaulted him in his garage office. Later, he told the court, Fredman called him up and asked if he could "still talk."

Levick said he had lost about $5,000 gambling with Freedman.

Costa Rica Phone Service Is Seized By Commie Party

Action Climaxes Month-Long Revolt

WASHINGTON, April 13 (AP) — Telephone communications with San Jose were interrupted today shortly after the State Department reported Communist seizure of the telephone headquarters in the Costa Rican capital.

The development came at the climax of a month-long revolt in which the Communists had been supporting the government. The fighting is over an election dispute in which Congress nullified the victory of the anti-government candidate, Otilio Ulate, on charges of fraud.

Calls Are Delayed

Officials of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company said "due to disturbed political conditions in Costa Rica there will be an indefinite delay on all calls." One official said that means the circuit is "definitely out."

Cable service, however, is operating normally.

The State Department said it had reports members of the Communist Vanguardia Popular Party seized the headquarters and immediately began a purge of employees.

The Communists made their move at a time when members of the diplomatic corps in San Jose were trying to spare the capital from house to house fighting.

American authorities feared, however, that the Communists might ignore any agreement between the warring factions to declare the capital an open city.

Rebel forces led by Jose Figueres are now within six or seven miles of the capital, diplomatic advises said.

To Confer With Figueres

The State Department said a five-man diplomatic team left the capital this morning to confer with Figueres.

The group includes U. S. Ambassador Nathaniel P. Davis.

The Vanguardia Popular Party has some 8,000 members out of a population of 800,000.

Whereas the party was once believed to be an isolated Communist outfit, American authorities now consider it tied in with Moscow.

The party holds the balance of power in the new Congress with seven seats. The revolting National Union Party coalition has 24 seats and the Pro-Government Party 23.

Dewey Running Close Second In Early Count

Omaha May Help N. Y. Governor

OMAHA, April 13 (AP)—Complete returns from 199 of 2,024 precincts (one reporting in Omaha) for Republican presidential preference: Stassen 6,978, Dewey 4,695, Taft 1,984, Vandenberg 586, MacArthur 494, Warren 111, Martin 114.

OMAHA, April 13—(AP)—Harold E. Stassen rolled up tonight an early farm area lead over Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in Nebraska's Presidential primary.

Sen. Robert A. Taft dropped steadily behind the two leaders as the vote totals mounted in 58 of the state's counties. No returns were available yet from the largest city, Omaha, and only one precinct in Lincoln.

Tabulations in the state's biggest city—where Dewey was figured to run strongly—were delayed by counts for local contests.

In the farm and small town areas, the complete vote from 138 of the state's 2,024 precincts gave:

Taft Is Third

Stassen 4,937, Dewey 3,400, and Taft 1,444.

Sen. Arthur Vandenberg, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Gov. Earl Warren, California, and House Speaker Martin, running in that order, seemed clearly out of the race for the state's presidential endorsement.

This endorsement probably will carry with it support of the state's 15 convention votes on the first Philadelphia ballot.

Stassen, Dewey and Taft held their one, two, three positions steadily during the counting of the early returns.

The first returns from the farm areas showed Stassen collecting nearly 45 per cent of the vote in those sections. Dewey got around 35 per cent and Taft only 15 in an area where his supporters had hoped he would be strong.

Taft also was runnning behind in the incomplete counts of city voting, indicating that unless there is a change in trend he may not be a close contender in his first primary trial for the GOP nomination.

A cross section check of 28 Omaha precincts, before the counting in them was completed, gave Dewey 955 votes to 644 for Stassen. Taft had 408.

From almost every part of the state came reports that Nebraskans had turned out in large numbers to name their choice in a seven-man contest that may have heavy bearing on selection of the next Republican Presidential candidate.

The first report on vote counting came from a precinct in Scotts Bluff County, far western ranching area. Officials said the incomplete vote there was: Dewey 45, Stassen 35 and Taft 5.

Omaha, which casts about one-fifth of the state's vote, apparently piled up a heavy total that might eclipse the 68,656 recorded here in the 1946 state primary.

Estimates of the state vote ranged around 300,000, short of the record 341,869 cast in the 1940 presidential primary. Weather and road conditions were good, with sunny skies over most of the state during the day.

Indicating the closeness of the race, supporters of the three most active candidates—Dewey, Taft and Stassen—carefully avoided making any early victory claims.

There were no definite indications of the voting trends on four others entered in the free-for-all primary. They are Sen. Arthur Vandenberg, Michigan, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Gov. Earl Warren, California, and House Speaker Joseph Martin, Massachusetts.

Russia Denies Aiding In Bogota Revolution

LONDON, Wednesday, April 14 (AP) —The Soviet News Agency Tass today termed "absurd fabrications" what it said were "rumors of participation of Soviet or Russian agents in the events in Bogota."

The rumors, Tass said in a dispatch broadcast by the Moscow radio, "are being disseminated for purposes hostile to the Soviet Union."

Army Pilot On Rescue Mission Is Saved From Icy Death On Mt. Hood

PORTLAND, Ore., April 13 (INS)—Lt. Edward J. Kahoun, Army pilot from McChord Field, Tacoma, Wash., was rescued today from the frozen slopes of Mt. Hood. His plane crashed on the mountain Monday while he was searching for a lost National Guard A26 bomber with three men aboard.

Aerial observers spotted Kahoun shortly after noon frantically waving from a snow field, four miles down the mountain from his wrecked L-5 liaison plane.

Ground searchers who had reached the plane this morning, only to find the pilot missing, were guided to Kahoun by walkie-talkie instructions from the search planes.

A first aid ambulance was ordered to meet the rescue party near the Mount Hood Loop-Wapinitia Highway junction east of Government Camp.

Reports received at National Guard Headquarters in Portland indicated Kahoun was suffering from exhaustion and exposure but had escaped serious injury.

His fur-lined flying boots, woolen underclothing and flying suit afforded him some protection from the icy blasts that swept the mountain.

Swirling Ohio River Hits Low Areas In Four States

CINCINNATI, O., April 13—(INS)—Swirling waters of the Ohio River invaded lowland areas in Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky and Indiana tonight and sent thousands of residents scurrying for high ground.

Although weather bureau officials refused as yet to predict a top crest, indications were the Ohio would hit stages five to seven feet above flood stage from Pittsburgh to Louisville, Ky.

Red Cross relief stations were set up at five key spots. Evacuation of lowland residents began last night as tributaries flowing into the Ohio River went out of their banks and inundated lowland areas in the four-state area.

The flood was caused by heavy weekend rains over the Ohio Valley. Predicted fair weather tomorrow brought hopes that the flood would not reach disaster proportions.

The 52-foot flood stage was reached at Cincinnati this afternoon and predictions are that the river will hit 59 feet tomorrow. However, only lowland areas in the Queen City area are flooded up to 60 feet and not much damage is anticipated unless the crest goes above that point.

Upstream at Portsmouth, city officials were taking no chances. Flood stage of 50 feet was reached there also but a million-dollar flood wall keeps the muddy waters out 12 feet higher. However, sandbags were prepared and officials predicted they could keep a 66-foot stage out of the city proper, although only 59 feet is forecast.

Louisville, where flood stage is 28 feet, anticipates 37 feet but not much damage will be done unless that stage is topped.

Smaller cities upstream, however, prepared for flooding of their business sections as the river rose rapidly. Marietta streets were flooded as were those at Pomeroy and Gallipolis. Parkersburg, W. Va., also faced some inundation.

Jewish Nurses, Doctors Among 41 Killed In Arab Ambush On Convoy

JERUSALEM, April 13 (INS) — Seventeen Jewish nurses, 17 doctors and the director of the Hadassah Medical Organization were among 41 persons reported killed today when Arabs ambushed a Jewish hospital convoy in Jerusalem. The attack lasted eight hours.

In all 34 Jews, six Arabs and a British soldier were killed in the attack and the three-cornered Arab-Jewish-British battle that followed. Scores were wounded.

The Haganah Official, Dr. Haim Yassky, returned to Palestine last January after consultations with officials of the organization in the United States on plans to expand Hadassah services in the Holy Land war. Hadassah is engaged in medical and welfare services in Palestine.

Dr. Yassky, a Palestinian, also was head of the Hadassah Hospital on Mount Scopus outside Jerusalem for which the convoy was bound. He leaves a wife, Sonia, and a son, Dov, 19.

The British soldier was killed and four other Britons, including a senior officer, were wounded when the British fired on both Jews and Arabs to break up a fight that developed in the Arab quarter of Sheikh Jarrah following the ambush.

Weather Forecast
Cloudy and cool with showers today.

STASSEN TAKES NEBRASKA LEAD

Air Power Fund Gets Approval Of House Group

Russia Is Believed Building Huge Fleet

WASHINGTON, April 13 (AP)—A House Committee stamped a quick "okay" today on a request or $2,376,100,000 for the new air power as Capitol Hill heard that Russia is building the world's greatest air force.

Meantime the House Armed Services Committee was in its second day of hearings for a draft bill, but in the Senate, where the Armed Services Committee was writing its legislation after two weeks of hearings, work bogged down temporarily.

Chairman Gurney (R-SD), chairman of the Senate Group, said the committee voted unanimously for a top age limit of 25 years on any required registration under the proposed draft and universal military training program, but that futher action was delayed by lack of a report from Defense Secretary Forrestal and joint chiefs of staff on air power needs.

Gurney said no more closed sessions will be held before Friday, and no other major decisions can be reached.

The announcement that Russia is building a giant air force was the second revelation in two days of Soviet progress. Yesterday Forrestal told the House that Russia knows how to make the atomic bomb but does not yet have the industrial ability to make it.

Air Secretary Symington told the House Armed Services Committee today that Russia is building the greatest air arm in the world and added:

"They seem to want to reach a decision with us and they want to reach it in the air."

He said they are building 12 times as many planes as we are.

Testifying on draft legislation, he said he believed an air force of 70 groups is more important than universal military training.

He said the air arm favors the draft, but mainly because the Army needs it. He said the air force could get all the men it needed through volunteers.

"As you know, we once had to stop our (volunteer) recruiting because we had all the men for whom we had money," he said.

Symington said the 70-group program calls for buying 1,312 war planes this year, and a total of 2,174 by July 1, 1950. He said he did not think production controls, such as allocation of steel, are needed to get the planes. Forrestal yesterday said this may be necessary later, but not now.

The Draft Bill now before the House Committee would authorize a draft to boost the armed forces to 1,944,000 men, about 559,500 more than they now have. It also provides for a 70-group air force instead of today's 55.

The House Appropriations Committee quickly approved the request for $2,376,100,000 to dip into next year's military funds for an emergency warplane and guided missile program.

The money under the new plan would merely be available for immediate spending. There was no indication how many planes it would buy.

Here is how it is earmarked:

Air forces: $1,223,100,000 new spending, including $358,100,000 cash and $865,000,000 in contract authority, plus $250,000,000 new cash to pay off previous contract authorizations.

Naval aeronautics: $753,000,000 new spending, including $165,000,000 new cash and $588,000,000 in contract authority, plus $150,000,000 new cash to pay off previous contract authorizations.

The cash for new spending includes $1,140,000,000 for plane buying, $10,300,000 for purchase of controlled missiles, and $72,800,000 for other projects.

For the navy $738,700,000 is for plane buying, $9,300,000 for pilotless aircraft and $5,000,000 for other projects.

Public Works Unit Begins Cleaning Up

BOGOTA, Colombia, April 13 (AP)—Fresh outbursts of shooting were heard outside the United States Embassy late today soon after it was voted to resume the Pan-American conference in this revolt-battered capital.

The nature of the new outbreak of gunfire was not determined immediately. The Colombian Army has been in complete control of Bogota all day and the shooting was the first heard anywhere in the city during the day.

The shooting phase of the Colombian revolution, which claimed about 300 lives and left the commercial and shopping centers of most of the nation's cities wrecked, was believed generally to have been over.

The gunfire was heard immediately after it was announced that the chief delegates of the 21 nations at the conference voted to renew their sessions tomorrow in rubble-strewn Bogota.

The action was in accord with conference sentiment to continue the meeting in order to show the Communists "they can't kick us out."

Romulo Betancourt, chief delegate from Venezuela, said the delegates approved his motion to continue the conference in the Colombian capital.

Cleanup Task Begins

The Colombian government charged its Public Works Engineers with the task of cleaning up the wreckage of last week's attempted revolution which U. S. Secretary of State Marshall said stemmed from the forces of international Communism.

Hundreds of citizens came out on the streets to go to the jobs they left when the revolution erupted Friday in a savage outburst of killing, looting and arson.

Bogota and the rest of the country are trying to clean up the mess left by rioters who looted, sacked and burned here and in many other cities.

Bogota is semi-destroyed. Hardly a public building, store or church escaped damage but the residential areas were virtually untouched.

Whole blocks in the heart of the city are in ruins with only walls standing. Industry and business are paralyzed. The position of organized labor, penetrated by the Communists, still is not clear.

Diplomatic Relations Confusing

The situation in respect to diplomatic relations with Russia is confusing. Yesterday the government radio announced three times that Colombia had severed diplomatic relations with Russia. Today a member of the Presidential secretariat said the cabinet had not yet aproved the decree for severing relations. The government said it had arrested a number of Communists, including two Russian agents.

Carlos Lozano, chief Colombian delegate to the conference, said the capitol building — site of the meeting — would be ready for occupancy by Saturday.

It was possible the conference may resume tomorrow with a ceremony honoring Simon Bolivar, South American liberator. Funeral services for Jorge Elicier Gaitan, liberal leader whose assassination touched off the revolt, are scheduled for then also at the capitol building.

Non-Commie Oath Clause In Labor Law Is Upheld

Court Splits 2-1 In Provision Rule

WASHINGTON, April 13 (AP)—A special Federal Court today upheld a provision of the Taft Hartley Labor Law which denies the privileges of the National Labor Relations Board to unions whose officers decline to swear they are not Communists.

The court split 2 to 1 in ruling the provision constitutional.

The majority said that Communism is a menace to the United States and to a Democracy and Congress had the right to seek to bar Communists from positions of labor leadership.

Uphold Other Clauses

The court, in the same case, unanimously upheld two other Taft-Hartley act sections which require unions to register annual financial statements and other data with the Labor Department.

The decision will be appealed to the Supreme Court, attorneys for the National Maritime Union (CIO) announced.

(Another decision of wide labor interest was announced today by the National Labor Relations Board. It ruled that employers must bargain with workers on pension or retirement pay plans. Some employers had contended pensions are outside the scope of compulsory collective bargaining.)

"To combat the Communist program, Congress at the request of the President is even now in the course of appropriating billions of dollars," the majority opinion of the federal court said.

"This court is asked to strike down as unconstitutional an arm of protection raised by congress against an assault upon our form of government which the constitution was provided to secure.

"In view of the avowed purpose of both the Wagner Act and the Taft-Hartley act to bring about a peaceful solution of labor quarrels, and the discernible purpose of the Communist Party to foment strikes and industrial disorders, Congress could well conclude that persons occupying key positions in the administration of labor laws should not be subject to conflicting loyalties or interests.

Bogota Prisoners Escape In Revolt

(This is a pooled dispatch from correspondents in Bogota, Colombia, received at Washington through the State Department.)

BOGOTA, April 13. (AP)—An estimated 3,000 prisoners, some serving long terms, escaped from the Modelo and Picito Penitentiaries during the height of the revolution, it was learned today.

Some Communist leaders here were arrested in a raid last night, it was reported meanwhile, but the top local Communist, Gilberto Viera, has been seen on the streets.

There is still great mystery about Colombia's delay in formalizing a break with Russia, which was announced by the government radio, with a decree being promised later. No decree has yet been published and no more mention of a break has been made on the radio since early yesterday.

Delegates to the disrupted Inter-American conference began at 2 P. M. (EST) a session at which they were expected to adopt a formal resolution expressing their determination to continue their meeting here.

The food situation remains a difficult one in the city. A survey of food supplies showed only limited quantities available and those being rationed by the army. People were lining up to buy what they could get.

Some public markets reopened on a small scale selling stocks they had on hand before the revolution. Despite army assurances that the roads to Bogota were clear, very little food was coming in from the countryside except small amounts of meat and milk.

Some grocery store prices jumped from 50 to 200 per cent over pre-revolution levels despite government threats to punish speculators. A food crisis is expected next week.

Curbs On Rail Service Lifted As Strike Ends

Lewis Will Face Contempt Charge

WASHINGTON, April 13 (AP) — The government today lifted all restrictions on railroad service imposed as a result of the coal strike, and thousands of miners returned to work after a month's idleness. But John L. Lewis still must go on trial tomorrow on a contempt of court charge.

Coal burning railroads had been made to cut their service 25 per cent, and a second 25 per cent cut was due to take effect Thursday. The orders were suspended as of 4 p. m. (EST) today by the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Office of Defense Transportation "until further notice."

May Resume Restrictions

The wording implied that the restrictions might be put back if coal production doesn't begin building up the railroads' stockpiles.

Lewis' United Mine Workers, who walked out in a dispute over pensions, turned up at some mines today in substantial numbers. However, the back-to-work movement was far from complete in the soft coal fields.

In some of the diggings, production was estimated at 75 per cent of normal, but in other areas the miners were waiting for the outcome of Lewis' trial tomorrow before Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough.

The contempt of court charge is based on the contention that Lewis and his union ignored a restraining order issued by Federal Judge Matthew F. McGuire on April 3, telling the miners to go back to work.

Lewis' attorneys argued that he fulfilled the order yesterday by calling off the strike. The government contends that since McGuire's order called for ending the strike "forthwith," Lewis and the union have been in contempt since receiving the order formally on April 5.

Lewis faced Judge Goldsborough in late 1946 on another contempt charge. Goldsborough fined Lewis $10,000 and the United Mine Workers $3,500,000. The Supreme Court later reduced the union's fine to $700,000, but let Lewis' stand.

Two other legal questions come up before Judge Goldsborough tomorrow.

The union has moved to wipe out McGuire's original order on the ground it imposes "involuntary servitude." And the government has asked an injunction under the Taft-Hartley Labor Law to replace the temporary restraining order now in effect. The Taft-Hartley Law allows federal courts to enjoin strikes for as long as 80 days in cases of national emergency.

Agree On Settlement

Lewis called off the walkout yesterday after he and Senator Bridges (R-NH), a majority of the board of trustees administering the Miners' Welfare and Retirement Fund, agreed on a settlement of the pension dispute. Ezra Van Horn, oper-

U. S. Soldiers Are Reported In Bogota

BUENOS AIRES, April 13. (AP)—Argentine Sen. Alberto Durand said today United States soldiers guarded refugees from mobs in Bogota and exchanged shots with rioters.

Durand, a member of the Argentine Delegation to the Pan-American Conference in Bogota, returned by plane this afternoon.

(There was no immediate explanation of the presence of United States troops in the Colombian capital.)

WASHINGTON, April 13. (AP)—State Department officials said today they have no information of any American troops in Bogota.

There are American officers assigned to the embassy and to a military mission in Colombia. But officials said they found it impossible to believe that any American military men would have fired shots during the Bogota rioting.

INCENTIVE TO WORK—It was back to work yesterday for thousands of West Virginia coal miners, but in the case of C. F. Clemons, Beckley, W. Va., employed at the Western Gas and Fuel Association, Helen, W. Va., there was a triple incentive. Mrs. Myrtle Clemons, his wife, gave birth to triplets just before the mine holiday ended. They have seven other children.

Employers Must Discuss Pensions, NLRB Rules

Decision May Go To Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, April 13 (AP) — The National Labor Relations Board ruled today in a 4-1 decision that the Taft-Hartley Act requires employers to bargain about pensions if their employes ask them to.

The board found the Inland Steel Company guilty of refusing to bargain with the CIO Steelworkers Union. It ordered the company to discuss pension changes with the union, provided the union's officers file non-Communist oaths within 30 days.

But the decision goes beyond this case.

Unless overthrown in the courts, the ruling brings the whole subject of pension or retirement plans within the scope of compulsory bargaining.

Applies To All Companies

It applies to all companies in interstate commerce where a union is the recognized bargaining agent of the workers. And it applies whether or not a pension plan now exists in a plant.

Ernest S. Ballard, an attorney representing Inland Steel, said the company will ask a U. S. Court of Appeals to set aside the board's decision. The case may wind up in the Supreme Court.

The duty to bargain collectively, as defined in the law, means meeting at reasonable times and conferring in good faith with respect to wages, hours, and "other terms and conditions of employment."

It does not mean that either party is compelled to agree to a proposal or make a concession.

Some employers have contended that neither the Taft-Hartley Act nor its forerunner, the Wagner Act, required them to talk with unions about such issues as pension plans.

The four-man majority held today:

1. That pension payments are a form of "wages."

2. That the terms under which pensions are to be paid, such as the age of retirement, come within the meaning of "conditions of employment."

Russia Rejects Trieste Caucus

LONDON, April 13 (AP)—The Moscow Radio said tonight Russia had rejected as "unacceptable" a proposal of the United States, Britain and France for a four-power conference to consider the return of Trieste to Italy.

The broadcast said the Russian note was delivered today to London, Paris and Washington.

The Moscow radio quoted the note as saying that Trieste was created a free city by the Italian peace treaty, which was prepared by the Big Four Council of Foreign Ministers and signed by 21 nations.

Revising such a document by means of "correspondence or by convening private conferences" not only is unacceptable but violates the "elemental principles of Democracy," the note said.

The U.S., France and Britain had proposed a meeting of the "powers principally concerned" at Paris early in May.

Militia Sought For Palestine

LAKE SUCCESS, April 13. (AP)—The United Nations Palestine Partition Commission declared tonight military forces must be sent to Palestine to avert chaos after May 15.

In a report to the extraordinary general assembly which meets in New York Friday, the five-member commission warned that these forces would be needed urgently regardless of what the assembly decides to do about the partition project.

"The steadily deteriorating situation in Palestine," the commission said, "leads to the inescapable conclusion that, in the absence of forces adequate to restore and maintain law and order in Palestine following the termination of the mandate, there will be chaos, starvation, widespread strife, violence and bloodshed in Palestine, including Jerusalem."

The commission also reported it had been handicapped by the refusal of the Security Council to provide either military support or guidance, as recommended by the assembly.

"The refusal of the mandatory power (Britain) to co-operate in implementing the plan, its rejection of any progressive transfer of authority, and the inability of the commission to be in Palestine, constitute a serious jeopardy to the discharge of the commission's responsibilities," the report said.

Judge Nullifies "Gambling" Debt

BALTIMORE, April 13 (AP)—Judge Joseph Sherbow ordered an investigation today of the case of a bettor who testified that henchmen of a bookmaker beat him up when he defaulted on his gambling debts.

Declaring that "strong armed methods are not going to be condoned in this community," Judge Sherbow ruled null and void a deed of trust obtained by the bookmaker from the man as security for a $1,900 debt.

"I thought the era of never giving a sucker an even break went out with prohibition, but I have seen it reenacted in this case," the judge said.

The suit was filed by Harry H. Levick on grounds he was "coerced" into signing a deed of trust for his 24 garages, valued at $22,000 or more.

Levick brought the suit against Bernard Freedman, who admitted in court he had been convicted of bookmaking and that he had taken bets from Levick.

Freedman denied in the civil suit that the deed of trust had covered gambling debts. He said the $1,900 represented personal loans he had made to Levick.

In invalidating the deed, Judge Sherbow pointed out that under its terms Freedman would have received the garages if Levick had defaulted on payments of the $1,900.

Levick testified during the proceedings that two "henchmen" of Freedman's asaulted him in his garage office. Later, he told the court, Fredman called him up and asked if he could "still talk."

Levick said he had lost about $5,000 gambling with Freedman.

Costa Rica Phone Service Is Seized By Commie Party

Action Climaxes Month-Long Revolt

WASHINGTON, April 13 (AP) — Telephone communications with San Jose were interrupted today shortly after the State Department reported Communist seizure of the telephone headquarters in the Costa Rican capital.

The development came at the climax of a month-long revolt in which the Communists had been supporting the government. The fighting is over an election dispute in which Congress nullified the victory of the anti-government candidate, Otilio Ulate, on charges of fraud.

Calls Are Delayed

Officials of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company said "due to disturbed political conditions in Costa Rica there will be an indefinite delay on all calls." One official said that means the circuit is "definitely out."

Cable service, however, is operating normally.

The State Department said it had reports members of the Communist Vanguardia Popular Party seized the headquarters and immediately began a purge of employees.

The Communists made their move at a time when members of the diplomatic corps in San Jose were trying to spare the capital from house to house fighting.

American authorities feared, however, that the Communists might ignore any agreement between the warring factions to declare the capital an open city.

Rebel forces led by Jose Figueres are now within six or seven miles of the capital, diplomatic advises said.

To Confer With Figueres

The State Department said a five-man diplomatic team left the capital this morning to confer with Figueres.

The group includes U. S. Ambassador Nathaniel P. Davis.

The Vanguardia Popular Party has some 8,000 members out of a population of 800,000.

Whereas the party was once believed to be an isolated Communist outfit, American authorities now consider it tied in with Moscow.

The party holds the balance of power in the new Congress with seven seats. The revolting National Union Party coalition has 24 seats and the Pro-Government Party 23.

Dewey Running Close Second In Early Count

Omaha May Help N. Y. Governor

OMAHA, April 13 (AP)—Complete returns from 199 of 2,024 precincts (one reporting in Omaha) for Republican presidential preference: Stassen 6,978, Dewey 4,695, Taft 1,984, Vandenberg 586, MacArthur 494, Warren 111, Martin 114.

OMAHA, April 13—(AP)—Harold E. Stassen rolled up tonight an early farm area lead over Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in Nebraska's Presidential primary.

Sen. Robert A. Taft dropped steadily behind the two leaders as the vote totals mounted in 58 of the state's counties. No returns were available yet from the largest city, Omaha, and only one precinct in Lincoln.

Tabulations in the state's biggest city—where Dewey was figured to run strongly—were delayed by counts for local contests.

In the farm and small town areas, the complete vote from 138 of the state's 2,024 precincts gave:

Taft Is Third

Stassen 4,937, Dewey 3,400, and Taft 1,444.

Sen. Arthur Vandenberg, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Gov. Earl Warren, California, and House Speaker Martin, running in that order, seemed clearly out of the race for the state's presidential endorsement.

This endorsement probably will carry with it support of the state's 15 convention votes on the first Philadelphia ballot.

Stassen, Dewey and Taft held their one, two, three positions steadily during the counting of the early returns.

The first returns from the farm areas showed Stassen collecting nearly 45 per cent of the vote in those sections. Dewey got around 35 per cent and Taft only 15 in an area where his supporters had hoped he would be strong.

Taft also was runnning behind in the incomplete counts of city voting, indicating that unless there is a change in trend he may not be a close contender in his first primary trial for the GOP nomination.

A cross section check of 28 Omaha precincts, before the counting in them was completed, gave Dewey 955 votes to 644 for Stassen. Taft had 408.

From almost every part of the state came reports that Nebraskans had turned out in large numbers to name their choice in a seven-man contest that may have heavy bearing on selection of the next Republican Presidential candidate.

The first report on vote counting came from a precinct in Scotts Bluff County, far western ranching area. Officials said the incomplete vote there was: Dewey 45, Stassen 35 and Taft 5.

Omaha, which casts about one-fifth of the state's vote, apparently piled up a heavy total that might eclipse the 68,656 recorded here in the 1946 state primary.

Estimates of the state vote ranged around 300,000, short of the record 341,869 cast in the 1940 presidential primary. Weather and road conditions were good, with sunny skies over most of the state during the day.

Indicating the closeness of the race, supporters of the three most active candidates—Dewey, Taft and Stassen—carefully avoided making any early victory claims.

There were no definite indications of the voting trends on four others entered in the free-for-all primary. They are Sen. Arthur Vandenberg, Michigan, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Gov. Earl Warren, California, and House Speaker Joseph Martin, Massachusetts.

Russia Denies Aiding In Bogota Revolution

LONDON, Wednesday, April 14 (AP) —The Soviet News Agency Tass today termed "absurd fabrications" what it said were "rumors of participation of Soviet or Russian agents in the events in Bogota."

The rumors, Tass said in a dispatch broadcast by the Moscow radio, "are being disseminated for purposes hostile to the Soviet Union."

Swirling Ohio River Hits Low Areas In Four States

CINCINNATI, O., April 13—(INS)—Swirling waters of the Ohio River invaded lowland areas in Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky and Indiana tonight and sent thousands of residents scurrying for high ground.

Although weather bureau officials refused as yet to predict a top crest, indications were the Ohio would hit stages five to seven feet above flood stage from Pittsburgh to Louisville, Ky.

Red Cross relief stations were set up at five key spots. Evacuation of lowland residents began last night as tributaries flowing into the Ohio River went out of their banks and inundated lowland areas in the four-state area.

The flood was caused by heavy weekend rains over the Ohio Valley. Predicted fair weather tomorrow brought hopes that the flood would not reach disaster proportions.

The 52-foot flood stage was reached at Cincinnati this afternoon and predictions are that the river will hit 59 feet tomorrow. However, only lowland areas in the Queen City area are flooded up to 60 feet and not much damage is anticipated unless the crest goes above that point.

Upstream at Portsmouth, city officials were taking no chances. Flood stage of 50 feet was reached there also but a million-dollar flood wall keeps the muddy waters out 12 feet higher. However, sandbags were prepared and officials predicted they could keep a 66-foot stage out of the city proper, although only 59 feet is forecast.

Louisville, where flood stage is 28 feet, anticipates 37 feet but not much damage will be done unless that stage is topped.

Smaller cities upstream, however, prepared for flooding of their business sections as the river rose rapidly. Marietta streets were flooded as were those at Pomeroy and Gallipolis. Parkersburg, W. Va., also faced some inundation.

Army Pilot On Rescue Mission Is Saved From Icy Death On Mt. Hood

PORTLAND, Ore., April 13 (INS)—Lt. Edward J. Kahoun, Army pilot from McChord Field, Tacoma, Wash., was rescued today from the frozen slopes of Mt. Hood. His plane crashed on the mountain Monday while he was searching for a lost National Guard A26 bomber with three men aboard.

Aerial observers spotted Kahoun shortly after noon frantically waving from a snow field, four miles down the mountain from his wrecked L-5 liaison plane.

Ground searchers who had reached the plane this morning, only to find the pilot missing, were guided to Kahoun by walkie-talkie instructions from the search planes.

A first aid ambulance was ordered to meet the rescue party near the Mount Hood Loop-Wapinitia Highway junction east of Government Camp.

Reports received at National Guard Headquarters in Portland indicated Kahoun was suffering from exhaustion and exposure but had escaped serious injury.

His fur-lined flying boots, woolen underclothing and flying suit afforded him some protection from the icy blasts that swept the mountain.

Jewish Nurses, Doctors Among 41 Killed In Arab Ambush On Convoy

JERUSALEM, April 13 (INS) — Seventeen Jewish nurses, 17 doctors and the director of the Hadassah Medical Organization were among 41 persons reported killed today when Arabs ambushed a Jewish hospital convoy in Jerusalem. The attack lasted eight hours.

In all 34 Jews, six Arabs and a British soldier were killed in the attack and the three-cornered Arab-Jewish-British battle that followed. Scores were wounded.

The Haganah Official, Dr. Haim Yassky, returned to Palestine last January after consultations with officials of the organization in the United States on plans to expand Hadassah services in the Holy Land war. Hadassah is engaged in medical and welfare services in Palestine.

Dr. Yassky, a Palestinian, also was head of the Hadassah Hospital on Mount Scopus outside Jerusalem for which the convoy was bound. He leaves a wife, Sonia, and a son, Dov, 19.

The British soldier was killed and four other Britons, including a senior officer, were wounded when the British fired on both Jews and Arabs to break up a fight that developed in the Arab quarter of Sheikh Jarrah following the ambush.

Dixie's Eveready Temper Flares At Mass. Governor

Verbal Battle Is Over Textile Plants

ATLANTA, April 13 (AP) — Dixie's eveready temper was vented in unison today on a Yankee statement that the moonlight and magnolia boys are kidnapping the north's textile industry.

Lt. Gov. Arthur W. Coolidge, Massachusetts, brought on the onslaught. He said some harsh things in a civic club talk yesterday about "Bilbo-belt banjo strummers," "Dixie claghorns," "tobacco road" and "razorback hog states."

Retorted W. H. (Little Eva) Talbot, the man who staged the successful campaign for governor-designate Earl K. Long of Louisiana:

"Want To Run Things"

"We let those damn Yankees win a war by accident and they think they are as good as we are and are going to run things all the time. When they come down here and eat our shrimp and drink our Mississippi river water, they always want to come back."

Executive Vice President Charles Dudley of the Associated Industries of Georgia was the first to set the southern reaction tune. He called the Massachusetts official a "blatherskite." The dictionary says that's a talkative, blustering noisy fellow.

Chairman Steuby Drumm of the middle-south development committee said "the lieutenant governor has been sitting in the snow too long."

In Alabama, Executive Vice President Dwight M. Wilhelm of the Alabama Cotton Manufacturers Association said Coolidge "just waked up too late for breakfast." The textile industry has been treking to the south for years, he added, "because of natural advantages."

Mississippi Governor Fielding L. Wright, after labeling Coolidge's statements "malicious, unwarranted and underhanded," added:

Faces Numerical Odds

"When the Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts finds himself in position to grow long staple cotton on the rocky shores of his state, then and only then will he have any sound basis for trying to get his industries back."

With numerical odds about 20 to 1 against him in the verbal war, Coolidge was undaunted. His reply today:

"If, in fighting to protect the jobs of thousands of Massachusetts workers and the business of bay state manufacturers, I have touched off a series of rebel yells from the Ku Klux Klan country, then I have done something constructive for the people of America.

"We want the south to prosper, but not at our expense. Let it start new industries as we do not try to kidnap theirs. Let it give unions a new deal as we do, not browbeat labor. Let it practice civil liberties as we do, not deny those rights to colored citizens."

GOING TO BRAZIL—President Truman has nominated Herschel V. Johnson, deputy U. S. representative to the United Nations, as Ambassador to Brazil. He will succeed William D. Pawley.

Non-Commie

The majority opinion was written by Appeals Court Judge Wilbur K. Miller, with Chief District Court Judge Bolitha J. Laws agreeing.

It said that free speech and other basic rights were not violated by the non-Communist oath requirement.

"This act does not require any union officer to say whether he is a Communist," the majority said. "He may freely choose to speak or not to speak.

"Neither the officer nor his union has a constitutional right to the advantages offered by the act; consequently if a union officer declines to execute the affidavit, it is his decision to remain silent which excludes his union."

Hershey Seeks Immediate Plan To Mobilize Men

Local Armories Termed Wasteful

FORT MEADE, Md., April 13 (AP) —Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, wartime draft director, today asked Selective Service officers from eight states to draw up both immediate and long-range plans for manpower mobilization.

He spoke to the opening session of a two-week conference which brought together the Adjutants General and Selective Service officers of Maryland, Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Tennessee and North and South Carolina.

"You will have a lot more time during the two weeks of this conference to think about what is necessary than you will have in the next two months if a national mobilization is ordered," Gen. Hershey told them.

Wants Prepardness

"Your problem is to find out what we have in the way of manpower and what we need for any eventuality.

"The more atomic the world becomes, the more necessary it becomes to make our plans now. If our people understand that on the day an atomic bomb falls there will be no time to make the sort of plans you are preparing to discuss today it will be easier for them to understand our problems.

"I still believe in peace—but only if we are strong enough and ready enough to make any aggressor uncertain as to the price that would have to be paid to defeat us."

"The philosophy that America has abundant manpower is a delusion. We must begin thinking in terms of survival rather than preparedness."

Gen. Hershey is now director of Selective Service Records. The conference of state officials is one of several regional meetings throughout the country.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, adjutant General of Maryland addressed the group and deplored previous systems of manpower priority for certain branches of the armed forces. He said elimination of this is one of the main problems before the group.

"During the war," he declared, "the air forces and the other services got the men of highest intelligence and the infantry got what was left."

Cites Cumberland Armories

Gen. Reckord also described as "wasteful and expensive" the competition for manpower among the services. To illustrate, he said that Cumberland, Md., already had a National Guard armory but the Navy and Marine Corps came along and built two more to house their reserve components.

Gen. Hershey seconded Gen. Reckord's comments and declared an agreement among the services for allocation of manpower should be made immediately.

John Cassell, chairman of a local draft board in Baltimore for almost seven years, outlined the local board's problems for the conference.

ators' representative on the board, said he was "not satisfied" with the arrangement.

It provides for $100 a month pensions for united mine workers members who are more than 62 years old and have 20 years service. To qualify for the pensions, the miners must have retired since May 29, 1946, the day the government gave Lewis his first welfare fund, which is financed out of a royalty on coal mined.

A fund of $5,000,000 was set aside to finance the pension payments under the plan agreed upon by Lewis and Bridges.

Lewis didn't show up for yesterday's preliminary hearing before Judge Goldsborough, but union attorneys said he would be on hand tomorrow.

More than 30,000 Pennsylvania anthracite miners who had been on a sympathy walkout returned to work today, reports from Pottsville, Pa., said.

Propose FCS Pay Hike

WASHINGTON, April 13 (AP) — Twin bills proposing pay increases averaging about $10 a week for all Federal Civil Service workers and postal employes were approved by the House Civil Service Committee today.

Employers Must

pensions if requested, but can't change its existing pension program without first consulting the union.

Gray Opposes Decision

The dissenting vote was cast by J. Copeland Gray.

He said he found nothing in the law requiring compulsory bargaining on pensions. He also said management and labor have not made a practice of bargaining on such matters and have never thought of it as compulsory.

Gray said it is "impractical and infesible x x x to require bargaining on such programs as a matter of law, and that this would lead to many "complexities and confusions."

Two plants of Inland Steel were involved in the case. They are at Chicago Heights, Ill., and Indiana Harbor, Ind.

Neither the local steelworkers unions at those plants nor the national union headed by Philip Murray have registered and filed non-Communist affidavits, as required before they can benefit from NLRB procedures. Therefore the board's orders against Inland were conditional.

Dixie's Eveready Temper Flares At Mass. Governor

Verbal Battle Is Over Textile Plants

ATLANTA, April 13 (AP) — Dixie's eveready temper was vented in unison today on a Yankee statement that the moonlight and magnolia boys are kidnapping the north's textile industry.

Lt. Gov. Arthur W. Coolidge, Massachusetts, brought on the onslaught. He said some harsh things in a civic club talk yesterday about "Bilbo-belt banjo strummers," "Dixie claghorns," "tobacco road" and "razorback hog states."

Retorted W. H. (Little Eva) Talbot, the man who staged the successful campaign for governor-designate Earl K. Long of Louisiana:

"Want To Run Things"

"We let those damn Yankees win a war by accident and they think they are as good as we are and are going to run things all the time. When they come down here and eat our shrimp and drink our Mississippi river water, they always want to come back."

Executive Vice President Charles Dudley of the Associated Industries of Georgia was the first to set the southern reaction tune. He called the Massachusetts official a "blatherskite." The dictionary says that's a talkative, blustering noisy fellow.

Chairman Steuby Drumm of the middle-south development committee said "the lieutenant governor has been sitting in the snow too long."

In Alabama, Executive Vice President Dwight M. Wilhelm of the Alabama Cotton Manufacturers Association said Coolidge "just waked up too late for breakfast." The textile industry has been treking to the south for years, he added, "because of natural advantages."

Mississippi Governor Fielding L. Wright, after labeling Coolidge's statements "malicious, unwarranted and underhanded," added:

Faces Numerical Odds

"When the Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts finds himself in position to grow long staple cotton on the rocky shores of his state, then and only then will he have any sound basis for trying to get his industries back."

With numerical odds about 20 to 1 against him in the verbal war, Coolidge was undaunted. His reply today:

"If, in fighting to protect the jobs of thousands of Massachusetts workers and the business of bay state manufacturers, I have touched off a series of rebel yells from the Ku Klux Klan country, then I have done something constructive for the people of America.

"We want the south to prosper, but not at our expense. Let it start new industries as we do not try to kidnap theirs. Let it give unions a new deal as we do, not browbeat labor. Let it practice civil liberties as we do, not deny those rights to colored citizens."

GOING TO BRAZIL—President Truman has nominated Herschel V. Johnson, deputy U. S. representative to the United Nations, as Ambassador to Brazil. He will succeed William D. Pawley.

Non-Commie

The majority opinion was written by Appeals Court Judge Wilbur K. Miller, with Chief District Court Judge Bolitha J. Laws agreeing.

It said that free speech and other basic rights were not violated by the non-Communist oath requirement.

"This act does not require any union officer to say whether he is a Communist," the majority said. "He may freely choose to speak or not to speak.

"Neither the officer nor his union has a constitutional right to the advantages offered by the act; consequently if a union officer declines to execute the affidavit, it is his decision to remain silent which excludes his union."

Hershey Seeks Immediate Plan To Mobilize Men

Local Armories Termed Wasteful

FORT MEADE, Md., April 13 (AP) —Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, wartime draft director, today asked Selective Service officers from eight states to draw up both immediate and long-range plans for manpower mobilization.

He spoke to the opening session of a two-week conference which brought together the Adjutants General and Selective Service officers of Maryland, Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Tennessee and North and South Carolina.

"You will have a lot more time during the two weeks of this conference to think about what is necessary than you will have in the next two months if a national mobilization is ordered," Gen. Hershey told them.

Wants Prepardness

"Your problem is to find out what we have in the way of manpower and what we need for any eventuality.

"The more atomic the world becomes, the more necessary it becomes to make our plans now. If our people understand that on the day an atomic bomb falls there will be no time to make the sort of plans you are preparing to discuss today it will be easier for them to understand our problems.

"I still believe in peace—but only if we are strong enough and ready enough to make any aggressor uncertain as to the price that would have to be paid to defeat us."

"The philosophy that America has abundant manpower is a delusion. We must begin thinking in terms of survival rather than preparedness."

Gen. Hershey is now director of Selective Service Records. The conference of state officials is one of several regional meetings throughout the country.

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, adjutant General of Maryland addressed the group and deplored previous systems of manpower priority for certain branches of the armed forces. He said elimination of this is one of the main problems before the group.

"During the war," he declared, "the air forces and the other services got the men of highest intelligence and the infantry got what was left."

Cites Cumberland Armories

Gen. Reckord also described as "wasteful and expensive" the competition for manpower among the services. To illustrate, he said that Cumberland, Md., already had a National Guard armory but the Navy and Marine Corps came along and built two more to house their reserve components.

Gen. Hershey seconded Gen. Reckord's comments and declared an agreement among the services for allocation of manpower should be made immediately.

Curbs On Rail

ators' representative on the board, said he was "not satisfied" with the arrangement.

It provides for $100 a month pensions for united mine workers members who are more than 62 years old and have 20 years service. To qualify for the pensions, the miners must have retired since May 29, 1946, the day the government gave Lewis his first welfare fund, which is financed out of a royalty on coal mined.

A fund of $5,000,000 was set aside to finance the pension payments under the plan agreed upon by Lewis and Bridges.

Lewis didn't show up for yesterday's preliminary hearing before Judge Goldsborough, but union attorneys said he would be on hand tomorrow.

More than 30,000 Pennsylvania anthracite miners who had been on a sympathy walkout returned to work today, reports from Pottsville, Pa., said.

Propose FCS Pay Hike

WASHINGTON, April 13 (AP) — Twin bills proposing pay increases averaging about $10 a week for all Federal Civil Service workers and postal employes were approved by the House Civil Service Committee today.

Employers Must

pensions if requested, but can't change its existing pension program without first consulting the union.

Gray Opposes Decision

The dissenting vote was cast by J. Copeland Gray.

He said he found nothing in the law requiring compulsory bargaining on pensions. He also said management and labor have not made a practice of bargaining on such matters and have never thought of it as compulsory.

Gray said it is "impractical and infesible x x x to require bargaining on such programs as a matter of law, and that this would lead to many "complexities and confusions."

Two plants of Inland Steel were involved in the case. They are at Chicago Heights, Ill., and Indiana Harbor, Ind.

Neither the local steelworkers unions at those plants nor the national union headed by Philip Murray have registered and filed non-Communist affidavits, as required before they can benefit from NLRB procedures. Therefore the board's orders against Inland were conditional.

Hoffman Seems Well Qualified For ERP Task

The opening statement of Paul G. Hoffman, newly appointed chief of the European Recovery Program, carries a note of a man reared in the American tradition. After hearing the President's Council of Economic Advisors renew their call for standby rationing and wage-price controls, he told reporters that he believed voluntary controls would do a "better job" than federal regulation of American industry in producing what is required for foreign aid.

Experience and his own native gifts would seem to qualify Mr. Hoffman for one of the great tasks of the generation. An industrialist definitely affected with the public interest, he has been president of the Studebaker Corporation at a salary nearly five times what he will receive from the government. He has been chairman of the Committee for Economic Development and—importantly—he was a member of the committee which wrote the Harriman report on the European Recovery Program.

That program will now engage the man's sole attention. The expenditure of more than $5,000,000,000—or rather its equivalent in food, machinery and materiel—will be under his direction. It will be used in helping those foreign countries which may be counted upon to help themselves—to promote in their own areas the democratic way of life, and this to aid in the peaceful rebuilding of a war-wearied, war-ravaged world.

Calling for organizing skill, the broad approach and the keenest discernment, this task—it may well prove—holds the future in its keeping.

No longer is it necessary for a political candidate to be born in a log cabin. In fact, pressure groups have discovered that candidates born in mansions are more liberal with handouts if elected.

When and Where Taft And Truman Feud Started

In the background of the picket line in a news photograph a few days ago was the Soviet freighter Chukokta lying at her berth in Jersey City, her task of taking abroad American machinery interrupted. The picket line is composed of 25 members of the Hudson County Catholic War Veterans, who were protesting against shipments that "might be used in war against us." One of their banners declared "Supply Today, Draft Tomorrow." Another banner declared "Starve Communistic Aggression! Stop These Shipments!"

Thus a single picture dramatizes popular resentment that American supplies, including machinery indispensible in war, have been shipped in quantities to Soviet Russia. How did it all get started? No single picture would give the answer, but two sentences will do it. They are from the Congressional Record of April 10, 1945, a month before the German surrender.

The Senate had before it a bill to extend lend-lease for a year, also an amendment presented by a Republican Senator. As the latter explained the amendment, the purpose was to make the end of hostilities the dividing line between lend-lease operations and relief and rehabilitation operations. He urged that lend-lease, intended for prosecution of the war, should not be carried over indefinitely for purposes in no way related to the winning of the war.

So the amendment came to a vote, and there being a tie, the presiding officer exercised his constitutional right and cast the deciding vote. He did it in these words:

"On this question the yeas are 39 and the nays are 39. The Chair votes nay and the motion of the Senator from Ohio is lost."

The Senator from Ohio was Robert A. Taft. The man who broke the tie and defeated his amendment was the then Vice President, Harry S. Truman. Much has followed from this vote, and none of it has been good.

The new defense program, it is hoped, will not take Rosie the Riveter out of the kitchen, where she has just got her hand in again making that other implement of national security, the apple pie.

The Human Weakness

Man can weigh the stars, split the atom, cure diseases that once threatened to eliminate the human species and provide all sorts of marvels for his comfort and convenience. But so far he has been unable to control those passions rising out of his relationships which are his greatest menace.

Passion has made man the only species of life on earth that takes the life of its own kind. In fact men have made so many discoveries in the arts of taking the lives of their kind that the more sober of them fear the extinction which disease once might have brought about.

What is behind this peril of suicide for the human race? It is the fact that men group themselves according to race or geographical boundaries, adopt a set of tabus called culture and then wear chips on their shoulders against neighboring peoples. The people become a nation and the nation struggles against a competitor for survival or reaches out to possess more of the resources of the earth. Back of it all is the human weakness of intolerance—one group has no patience with another.

Surely the human can summon the resolve, for purposes of survival if nothing else, to change his ways. It is to be hoped it won't require a few ghastly atomic jolts to get him in the right frame of mind.

Hair Cut: $2

Most of the news is bad, and none more so for males than the latest dispatch from Anchorage, defense boom town in Alaska. Haircuts there jumped from $1.50 to $2. Yep—two iron men.

Taking note of this latest development on the inflation front, Civil Aeronautics Administration officials on the scene acted to alleviate the impact on their personnel thusly:

"Employees are expected to maintain a neat and sanitary appearance, but no question will be raised over the extension of normal periods between haircuts to five or six weeks—or longer—provided there is no interference in an employee's general efficiency."

Perhaps it won't be long until men again adopt the hirsute mode of frontier days affected by Custer and Cody. Less provocation has produced more violent reaction on occasion in the past.

The Accident Picture

Accidents have been a hazard to the well being of man since the day of creation and, for centuries, safety has been preached to overcome the difficulty. But the problem is more acute today than ever before and we cannot afford to turn a deaf ear on the warnings. Last year 100,000 lost their lives in this manner; 10,500,000 were injured; and the economic loss amounted to five billion dollars.

A catastrophe in which many are killed is always startling but the toll taken by such headliners is small compared with that which occurs each day in less spectacular mishaps. If we added up the losses from our major disasters since 1865, the number killed would probably be less than one-quarter the total of those who die each year from ordinary accidents.

Furthermore, the condition of the survivors is rarely publicized. This is unfortunate because an airing of the resultant tragedies might make the reckless driver or "speed king" think twice before starting his antics. Of the total injured last year, 380,000 will be left with some degree of impairment. Ten per cent of all available beds in hospitals are occupied by victims of accidents.

The present state of affairs is discouraging to the medical profession which has done so much to fight disease. Accidents kill more than all the infectious disorders combined and the sufferer is just as dead as if he succumbed to pneumonia. The basic fault lies with man himself. He has the ability to invent machines but they will be of little value if they become Frankenstein monsters and turn the tables on him. No matter which viewpoint is taken, the most important safety device in an auto is the driver. We should stop blaming the modern tempo of living and point the finger where it really belongs.

The person who is handicapped in any way should not place himself in situations where accidents are likely to occur. This applies to any one who has uncorrected defective vision or hearing and high blood pressure as well as the man or woman who is weak or fatigued or suffering from some malady. Reams have been written on alcoholism and its role in traffic casualties.

Various psychological causes are contributing factors also. The man or woman who is emotionally upset, worried, or blue is prone to lack judgment and muscular coordination and on such days, extra precautions are necessary. Something should be done about the exhibitionist, the accident-prone individual, and the stupid character who endangers not only his own life but that of the innocent bystander.

Common sense helps to keep us out of trouble. Home accidents, for example, head the list, with 33,500 fatalities in 1947. What caused them? Mainly neglect to keep the steps clear, the walks smooth, stovepipes clean, electric wires repaired, and carpets or linoleum in good shape. Failure to provide hand rails, and lighting for dark stairways accounted for others. In still another group, boxes, toys, or bottles were left where they did not belong; a sharp knife was not returned to a drawer, or ice or broken glass was not cleaned off the walk. Smoking in bed, dry cleaning of clothes in the kitchen, and climbing a ladder without making certain that the base was firmly set on the ground are other popular roads to calamity. We need to be careless only once and the damage is done.

GLANDULAR INACTIVITY

T. D. writes: Can a woman with underactive glands become pregnant?

Reply

Yes, but with reservations inasmuch as many cases of sterility are traceable to the glandular system. The overies, thyroid, and pituiatry are most important and extracts from these organs have proved helpful in some instances.

It Says Here

By BOB HOPE

Last week was Girls' Week here in Los Angeles and as a lesson in civic government, a group of teenagers from our high schools ran the city.

And they really made some unusual requests. . . . when they took over from Mayor Bowron, they didn't want the keys to the city . . just the key to Gregory Peck's house.

The first thing the bobby soxers did, after taking over the government, was to go to work on the mayor's limousine . . . and in twenty minutes they had the fanciest hot rod in town.

Their next step was to put a juke box in the city council . . . so when they put a motion before the house they could do it with a partner.

But a juke box in the City Council wasn't too good an idea . . . in the middle of an important debate the mayor, chief of police, and head of the fire department fainted. . . . Someone put on a Sinatra record.

The first law the kids tried to pass was really amazing. It was in favor of no homework, no washing dishes, no piano lessons, no baby sitting, no trips to the dentists, and no school. . . . How long can they sit in the balcony at the Bijou?

But the teachers were really glad when the whole thing was over and Mayor Bowron unlocked the jail and let them out.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Symington Speaks Mind to Armed Services Committee; Says 70-Group Air Force Most Important Defense Measure Today; Morse Criticizes Lack of Unification

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON, April 13—Secretary for Air Stuart Symington reversed his stand on universal military training when he faced the Senate armed services committee behind closed doors the other day, and made a desperate plea instead for a strong air force. His boss, Defense Secretary Forrestal, scowled on and said little.

The meeting was of vital interest to every man who may have to serve in the armed forces, and to every other American concerned with the defense of his country. For the first time in a recent Senate committee hearing, Forrestal gave his subordinate, the head of the air forces, free reign to speak out. Symington made the most of it.

Ever since the meeting of defense chiefs at Key West, it had been suspected that Navy and Army ground forces had held the air forces down in over-all defense planning. This was confirmed by Symington in last week's testimony.

In forceful language, he warned that it might already be too late to build up the air force before Russia got the atomic bomb.

"We said three years ago that your air force was going to hell, we said it again two years ago and we say this year that it is going to hell," blistered Symington. "We say this year that no matter how you try to fix it, you are not going to have an adequate air force by the time the Russians have the bomb. It is too late."

Catching the full glare of Forrestal's withering look, he tactfully added:

"Mr. Forrestal said we could say what we felt.

"It is true," Symington continued, "that we testified for universal military training. We did that before we knew the air force was going to be cut. We felt it would be a 70-group program."

Virginia's Senator Harry Byrd asked whether that meant Symington considered a 70-group air force more important than universal training.

'Yes, sir," he shot back, "and I can go farther than that. I think it is the most important thing that has been presented to this committee from the standpoint of military preparedness."

70 Group Too Low

General "Toughy" Spaatz, retiring air chief of staff, broke in:

"You can't win a war with 70 groups, but you can prevent the enemy from winning with 70 groups."

On the other hand, Spaatz warned, Forrestal's proposal for only 55 groups would leave the country dangerously shorthanded.

Senator Ed Robertson, Wyoming Republican, suggested that the committee would need more information to sell a 70-group air force to the public. Symington snapped back that the public was already sold on it.

"We want to be sure the people are not over-sold," broke in Chairman Chan Gurney of South Dakota, who has echoed Forrestal.

Symington pointed out that the air force was seeking no more than it had been insisting on for three years, whereas the other two services were taking advantage of the crisis-fanned hysteria to increase their demands.

"The air force is in desperate shape," he pleaded. "For three years we have appealed to modernize, not on a mobilization plan but on a peacetime plan. In the last two years our appeal has never even gotten to the Congress. At least Mr. Forrestal is letting us discuss it today."

No Unification Yet

The conflict between Forrestal and Symington finally got under the skin of Senator Wayne Morse, outspoken Oregon Republican.

"We have to get the chiefs of staff to agree on a unified program for total national defense," he reminded the defense chiefs, "and now the air force is going in one direction and the Army in another and the Navy in another. I am not convinced that you know exactly what you are doing."

"Unification is something that isn't going to be accomplished by waving a wand," shot back Forrestal. "There is no miracle involved. It will take a long, long time."

Then he added: "We are in the process now."

"I understand that persisted Morse, "but you want us to pass some legislation which in my opinion we don't have a prayer's chance of passing in this combined legislation. If you think we can bring out of the committee a bill combining UMT or the draft, you're licked before you even get started."

Even Chairman Gurney chimed in his agreement.

"As long as Senator Morse has brought this subject up," he declared, "I will lay this on the line also, that I agree with him completely. You cannot have these bills in one package unless you all pull in the same direction."

The only other objection was raised by Georgia Democrat Dick Russell, who rebelled against a proposal to build more B-29 superfortresses.

"We are getting ready to spend a lot of money on a lot of obsolete equipment," he fumed. "I am very apprehensive that by the time the Russians get the bomb we will wake up here with a lot of equipment that we have purchased at tremendous expense that will be obsolete."

Symington assured him that the B-29s would be a new, improved version.

Note 1—Later, Army Secretary Kenneth Royall told the armed services committee that a 70-group air force might be necessary in case of immediate danger, but that universay training would be more valuable in the long-range view. Under questioning, he contradicted some of the storm warnings his own department has been putting out and testified that he saw no immediate probability of war.

Note 2—The joint chiefs of staff have promised the senate to come back with a final recommendation in the debate between air power and manpower today.

Martin's Part In Mine Strike Maneuver Frowned On By Many

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, April 13—Comedy or tragedy?

For 29 days the nation's coal mines are closed by concerted action of mine union leaders.

Although the federal law provides for a mediation and conciliation service, the miners' union refuses to accept its services.

All efforts of the Secretary of Labor and the other executive agencies of the government to bring and end to the strike are of no avail.

John L. Lewis solemnly tells a federal court that the miners' work stoppage is a spontaneous affair and denies that when he sent them world about the coal operators "dishonoring" the contract this was tantamount to an order to strike.

Industry feels the pinch. Steel plants close down. The entire national economy and particularly transportation is affected.

A federal judge issues an order on John L. Lewis and the miners' union on April 3rd to stop the strike and it is served on April 5th.

For nine days Mr. Lewis and the mine union officials have an opportunity to obey the court order, but they don't.

Then, all of a sudden, on Capitol Hill from the office of the Speaker of the House of Representatives comes an announcement that after eleven minutes of conference Mr. Lewis and the representative of the operators have agreed on the naming of a third trustee in the pension dispute—the only real issue.

The public is asked to believe that only the miraculous powers of magic of Joseph W. Martin, Speaker of the House, brought the parties together and in eleven minutes accomplished what President Truman and Cyrus Ching, director of the U. S. Mediation and Conciliation Service, couldn't do in three and a half weeks while the country suffered a tragic loss in production.

Clever Mr. Lewis! He put into the hands of a Republican, Speaker Martin, a means of discrediting or humiliating by inference President Truman and the executive agencies. Mr. Lewis knew what he was doing—he thought it would enhance Mr. Martin's chances for the presidential nomination of the Republican Party and give the people generally the impression that the Republican leadership in Congress could settle the coal strike and the Democratic President could not.

Speaker Martin is a likeable person but the moment he agreed to be party to John Lewis' schemes, he lost ground with many disinterested persons who care more for court procedures and respect for the laws written by Congress than they do for politics.

Mr. Martin should have turned Mr. Lewis over to the U. S. Mediation Service, whose legal duty it is to arrange for mediation. Mr. Martin should have insisted that Mr. Lewis obey the order of the Federal Court at once before entering into a scheme to help Mr. Lewis get out of an uncomfortable position.

The theory that Mr. Martin knew nothing about the matter till he met with both sides at 11 o'clock last Saturday morning is too fantastic to be accepted. Somewhere along the line emissaries or intermediaries must have let it be known that if a certain step were taken, Mr. Lewis would be grateful and would agree to call off the strike.

But the compromise settlement, important as it is for the country, could have been achieved by obedience to the court order which was a prerequisite to any settlement.

What has been a game of comedy may turn out, however, to be a tragedy for the miners' union. The order of the court has been disobeyed. There is a penalty for that kind of disobedience. If the first penalty imposed a year ago—a large fine—did not obtain respect for the courts, a second penalty upon conviction would have to be viewed in the light of whether it is sufficiently severe to prevent a third offense.

On June 30th next, the present contract between the miners and the operators expires. Will there be another coal strike, another petition for an injunction and another disregard of the restraining order of a federal court? Why does the law of the land come down so heavily on the monopolists who happen to be employers and let huge labor organizations go free when they are dominated by a man who likes to have the public believe he is bigger than the government itself?

The trial on contempt charges will be watched by the American people to determine whether there is such a thing as "equal justice under law."

Help Yourself, Mr. Stalin? Roosevelt, Churchill Agreed

By SAMUEL B. PETTENGILL

Has Stalin gone beyond the point where Roosevelt and Churchill agreed he could go? That question may startle you, but before you rush hell-bent into another war, you would find some startling answers in the book, WHERE ARE WE HEADING?, by former Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles.

When Churchill and Stalin had their first meeting in Moscow, after the Hitler-Stalin deal fell through, "Great Britain recognized the predominant interest of the Soviet Union in Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Rumania, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria. Read 'em and weep). Reciprocally, the Soviet Union recognized the predominant interest of Great Britain in Greece." These agreements "were tacitly accepted by the United States at Moscow in October 1943, and at the Teheran Conference in the following month. They were, of course, recognized at the conference at Yalta in 1945." Hull was at Moscow; Roosevelt, at Teheran and Yalta. This is what Mr. Welles says we agreed to.

If Welles correctly states the true Roosevelt policy toward Russia President Truman and Stalin should have another talk before pulling the trigger.

Saw No Fear Of Communism

I quote further: "The insane delusion that democracy and communism cannot simultaneously exist in the world is rampant." Wallace would certainly say "amen" to that. Wallace hasn't changed. "Roosevelt said to me in so many words, 'We won't get any strong international organization unless we can find the way by which the Soviet Union and the United States can work together to build it up as the years go by.' That to him was the key issue."

"Franklin Roosevelt saw no need to fear Communism if an international organization existed." According to Welles, Roosevelt "believed American democracy and Soviet Communism could never meet."—quite. But Roosevelt did believe that our democracy would move 40% toward the Soviet system, and the latter would move 40% toward our system.

The Potsdam agreement in July 1945 shows that Truman was then following Roosevelt's footsteps. Welles quotes Truman as saying, "He had never found a man who was easier to get along with than Stalin."

Welles maintains that President Roosevelt believed that "the Soviet Union had a legitimate right to demand peace settlements that would secure her from the danger of attacks from beyond her borders. He felt that the Soviet could fairly insist that the new political regimes to be installed in the independent nations adjacent to her frontiers should be governments that were friendly and that represented the will of their people." Czechoslovakia is "adjacent to her frontiers."

Roosevelt Would Agree

With reference to Stalin's neighboring countries, Welles does think that Stalin has violated his promise to afford them "free and unfettered" elections. Roosevelt, if alive, would no doubt agree with Welles on this. But Poland was given no right of free election when Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill carved her up. To be carved up by one's comrades-in-arms, without being consulted and inviolation of the Atlantic Charter, was a worse blow to free elections than any previous setback. This rape of sovereignty showed Stalin how these things are done.

Aside from the question of free elections, it is hard to see where Welles thinks Stalin has gone beyond his understandings with Mr. Roosevelt.

What are the facts, President Truman? Does Mr. Welles correctly set forth Mr. Roosevelt's policy toward Russia?

Herbert Hoover's Health

Some time ago, some gossip columnists were busy marrying off Herbert Hoover. For a while it was amusing, but soon it became a bore, particularly as their stories began to point to specific persons. Of course, there never was any truth in the accounts and such speculation on private matters is disgraceful.

Now, for two weeks, on the radio, Walter Winchell has referred to Herbert Hoover's ill health. Fortunate for Mr. Hoover, he has recovered from a case of shingles, which was publicly announced at the end of last summer when it hit him, after long trips by airplane to Europe, Asia and South America. The shingles were unpleasant and for a time Mr. Hoover found it difficult to use his right arm, which had been affected. That was months ago, although Mr. Winchell just heard about it.

As I have seen Mr. Hoover often during the period of illness, convalence and recovery, I can speak of it. Even while he was troubled by the shingles, Mr. Hoover delivered three addresses to one of which he was accompanied not by a physician as was reported but by former Ambassador Hugh Gibson. The addresses, during that period, were to the Holland Society, the Sons of the Revolution and at the Madison Square Garden. He also went fishing off Florida and caught some fish. He conducted the meetings of the Commission on the Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government every month from September 29 until three weeks ago. The next meeting is scheduled for the beginning of next week and Mr. Hoover expects to be there. All these meetings were held in Washington and some of them have been hectic. Mr. Hoover lives in New York and has publicly traveled to Washington and back.

Mr. Hoover devotes himself to voluminous writing, for publication and for safekeeping. He does all his writing in longhand, using a lead pencil. Nobody ever ghost-writes Mr. Hoover's speeches or articles and although I have come across some liars and boasters who have claimed that honor, the story is not true. He uses his right hand for such purposes.

At any rate I have been with Mr. Hoover often during the past year. I have read some of the manuscripts. In a word, the shingles did not permanently injure Mr. Hoover's right arm. In fact, recently when I dined with him, I insisted on shaking his right hand for the fun of it and perhaps as a protest against the tales that were passing currency in New York's expensive saloons and vulgar bistros.

I am sure that Mr. Winchell is solicitous of the ex-President's health and that he wishes him well, and that Mr. Hoover is grateful for the solicitude, which comes months too late. Each time Mr. Winchell shows his deep concern, thousands of friends telephone and send messages of good cheer.

It would have been simpler for Mr. Winchell to telephone to Mr. Hoover or even to consult the editor and publisher of his newspaper, "The New York Mirror," who have ready access to Mr. Hoover. This is a story which could easily have been confirmed—cost, one nickel. Certainly, it has no news value and no radio value nearly nine months late and fully three months after Mr. Hoover's complete recovery.

Of course, anything can happen and when it is said that a man of 73 is ill, it is possible, if the story is repeated often enough, that the day will come when he may be ill. But Herbert Hoover seems to be unusually robust these days—somewhat greyer, somewhat thinner, but working extraordinarily hard.

As a matter of fact, his friends who are with him often, are astonished that at his age he keeps going as he does. Like Bernard Baruch and Jesse Jones, he seems not to tire. The Winchell reports have caused some to fear that Mr. Hoover has suffered a stroke. I can assure them that there is no truth in that.

This is my report on a very dear friend. I hope that Walter Winchell will accept this report. He ought, after so many years of reporting, be able to confirm the facts of a situation that seems so vital to him.

Today's Talk

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

Self-Effacement

The happiest people whom I know, or have always known, have been those whose interests are constantly being spread far outside the area of their own. In other words, taking an interest in someone else.

I get hundreds of letters from appreciative readers, who open up their hearts to me, and so many of these letters are most inspiring, because they are self-effacing—telling of their joy in doing things for their children, or for others. The unhappy letters are from those who see nothing in life, who enumerate their troubles and who seem to have all their thoughts centered upon themselves.

When we step out of our way to do some kind act or service for someone else, we eliminiate ourself for the moment. The returning response is one of personal satisfaction, like turning on the light in a dark room, where you are all alone. Every interest in the room then tends to self-effacement.

We learn most from listening to others. We gain most by giving. Each of us is a vital element in the vast human situation. Our thoughts and acts should forever remain liquid—forever flowing into every stream of hope and happiness. Again and again I like to repeat that line: He climbs highest who helps another up! The Good Samaritan totally effaced himself as he knelt and lifted that stranger beside the road to his own beast and saw that he was given aid and comfort. We can imagine his joy in having done something unusual, as others passed by, unthinking and unacting.

Our greatest realm of happiness is always reached far beyond our own little sphere. Every time we step out of our own self we step into another self that enlarges the self we are, so that self effacement becomes self-enlargement.

You may recall that inspiring poem by Leigh Hunt, of Abou Ben Adhem, who had a vision in which an Angel came to him, writing something down, but his name was not recorded. Then he replied:

". . .I pray thee, then,
Write me as one that loves his fellow-men."
The Angel wrote, and vanished.
The next night
It came again with a great wakening light,
And showed the names whom love of God had blessed,
And, lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest!

Hoffman Seems Well Qualified For ERP Task

The opening statement of Paul G. Hoffman, newly appointed chief of the European Recovery Program, carries a note of a man reared in the American tradition. After hearing the President's Council of Economic Advisors renew their call for standby rationing and wage-price controls, he told reporters that he believed voluntary controls would do a "better job" than federal regulation of American industry in producing what is required for foreign aid.

Experience and his own native gifts would seem to qualify Mr. Hoffman for one of the great tasks of the generation. An industrialist definitely affected with the public interest, he has been president of the Studebaker Corporation at a salary nearly five times what he will receive from the government. He has been chairman of the Committee for Economic Development and—importantly—he was a member of the committee which wrote the Harriman report on the European Recovery Program.

That program will now engage the man's sole attention. The expenditure of more than $5,000,000,000—or rather its equivalent in food, machinery and materiel—will be under his direction. It will be used in helping those foreign countries which may be counted upon to help themselves—to promote in their own areas the democratic way of life, and this to aid in the peaceful rebuilding of a war-wearied, war-ravaged world.

Calling for organizing skill, the broad approach and the keenest discernment, this task—it may well prove—holds the future in its keeping.

No longer is it necessary for a political candidate to be born in a log cabin. In fact, pressure groups have discovered that candidates born in mansions are more liberal with handouts if elected.

When and Where Taft And Truman Feud Started

In the background of the picket line in a news photograph a few days ago was the Soviet freighter Chukokta lying at her berth in Jersey City, her task of taking abroad American machinery interrupted. The picket line is composed of 25 members of the Hudson County Catholic War Veterans, who were protesting against shipments that "might be used in war against us." One of their banners declared "Supply Today, Draft Tomorrow." Another banner declared "Starve Communistic Aggression! Stop These Shipments!"

Thus a single picture dramatizes popular resentment that American supplies, including machinery indispensible in war, have been shipped in quantities to Soviet Russia. How did it all get started? No single picture would give the answer, but two sentences will do it. They are from the Congressional Record of April 10, 1945, a month before the German surrender.

The Senate had before it a bill to extend lend-lease for a year, also an amendment presented by a Republican Senator. As the latter explained the amendment, the purpose was to make the end of hostilities the dividing line between lend-lease operations and relief and rehabilitation operations. He urged that lend-lease, intended for prosecution of the war, should not be carried over indefinitely for purposes in no way related to the winning of the war.

So the amendment came to a vote, and there being a tie, the presiding officer exercised his constitutional right and cast the deciding vote. He did it in these words:

"On this question the yeas are 39 and the nays are 39. The Chair votes nay and the motion of the Senator from Ohio is lost."

The Senator from Ohio was Robert A. Taft. The man who broke the tie and defeated his amendment was the then Vice President, Harry S. Truman. Much has followed from this vote, and none of it has been good.

The new defense program, it is hoped, will not take Rosie the Riveter out of the kitchen, where she has just got her hand in again making that other implement of national security, the apple pie.

The Human Weakness

Man can weigh the stars, split the atom, cure diseases that once threatened to eliminate the human species and provide all sorts of marvels for his comfort and convenience. But so far he has been unable to control those passions rising out of his relationships which are his greatest menace.

Passion has made man the only species of life on earth that takes the life of its own kind. In fact men have made so many discoveries in the arts of taking the lives of their kind that the more sober of them fear the extinction which disease once might have brought about.

What is behind this peril of suicide for the human race? It is the fact that men group themselves according to race or geographical boundaries, adopt a set of tabus called culture and then wear chips on their shoulders against neighboring peoples. The people become a nation and the nation struggles against a competitor for survival or reaches out to possess more of the resources of the earth. Back of it all is the human weakness of intolerance—one group has no patience with another.

Surely the human can summon the resolve, for purposes of survival if nothing else, to change his ways. It is to be hoped it won't require a few ghastly atomic jolts to get him in the right frame of mind.

Hair Cut: $2

Most of the news is bad, and none more so for males than the latest dispatch from Anchorage, defense boom town in Alaska. Haircuts there jumped from $1.50 to $2. Yep—two iron men.

Taking note of this latest development on the inflation front, Civil Aeronautics Administration officials on the scene acted to alleviate the impact on their personnel thusly:

"Employees are expected to maintain a neat and sanitary appearance, but no question will be raised over the extension of normal periods between haircuts to five or six weeks—or longer—provided there is no interference in an employee's general efficiency."

Perhaps it won't be long until men again adopt the hirsute mode of frontier days affected by Custer and Cody. Less provocation has produced more violent reaction on occasion in the past.

The Accident Picture

Accidents have been a hazard to the well being of man since the day of creation and, for centuries, safety has been preached to overcome the difficulty. But the problem is more acute today than ever before and we cannot afford to turn a deaf ear on the warnings. Last year 100,000 lost their lives in this manner; 10,500,000 were injured; and the economic loss amounted to five billion dollars.

A catastrophe in which many are killed is always startling but the toll taken by such headliners is small compared with that which occurs each day in less spectacular mishaps. If we added up the losses from our major disasters since 1865, the number killed would probably be less than one-quarter the total of those who die each year from ordinary accidents.

Furthermore, the condition of the survivors is rarely publicized. This is unfortunate because an airing of the resultant tragedies might make the reckless driver or "speed king" think twice before starting his antics. Of the total injured last year, 380,000 will be left with some degree of impairment. Ten per cent of all available beds in hospitals are occupied by victims of accidents.

The present state of affairs is discouraging to the medical profession which has done so much to fight disease. Accidents kill more than all the infectious disorders combined and the sufferer is just as dead as if he succumbed to pneumonia. The basic fault lies with man himself. He has the ability to invent machines but they will be of little value if they become Frankenstein monsters and turn the tables on him. No matter which viewpoint is taken, the most important safety device in an auto is the driver. We should stop blaming the modern tempo of living and point the finger where it really belongs.

The person who is handicapped in any way should not place himself in situations where accidents are likely to occur. This applies to any one who has uncorrected defective vision or hearing and high blood pressure as well as the man or woman who is weak or fatigued or suffering from some malady. Reams have been written on alcoholism and its role in traffic casualties.

Various psychological causes are contributing factors also. The man or woman who is emotionally upset, worried, or blue is prone to lack judgment and muscular coordination and on such days, extra precautions are necessary. Something should be done about the exhibitionist, the accident-prone individual, and the stupid character who endangers not only his own life but that of the innocent bystander.

Common sense helps to keep us out of trouble. Home accidents, for example, head the list, with 33,500 fatalities in 1947. What caused them? Mainly neglect to keep the steps clear, the walks smooth, stovepipes clean, electric wires repaired, and carpets or linoleum in good shape. Failure to provide hand rails, and lighting for dark stairways accounted for others. In still another group, boxes, toys, or bottles were left where they did not belong; a sharp knife was not returned to a drawer, or ice or broken glass was not cleaned off the walk. Smoking in bed, dry cleaning of clothes in the kitchen, and climbing a ladder without making certain that the base was firmly set on the ground are other popular roads to calamity. We need to be careless only once and the damage is done.

GLANDULAR INACTIVITY

T. D. writes: Can a woman with underactive glands become pregnant?

Reply

Yes, but with reservations inasmuch as many cases of sterility are traceable to the glandular system. The overies, thyroid, and pituiatry are most important and extracts from these organs have proved helpful in some instances.

It Says Here

By BOB HOPE

Last week was Girls' Week here in Los Angeles and as a lesson in civic government, a group of teenagers from our high schools ran the city.

And they really made some unusual requests. . . . when they took over from Mayor Bowron, they didn't want the keys to the city . . just the key to Gregory Peck's house.

The first thing the bobby soxers did, after taking over the government, was to go to work on the mayor's limousine . . . and in twenty minutes they had the fanciest hot rod in town.

Their next step was to put a juke box in the city council . . . so when they put a motion before the house they could do it with a partner.

But a juke box in the City Council wasn't too good an idea . . . in the middle of an important debate the mayor, chief of police, and head of the fire department fainted. . . . Someone put on a Sinatra record.

The first law the kids tried to pass was really amazing. It was in favor of no homework, no washing dishes, no piano lessons, no baby sitting, no trips to the dentists, and no school. . . . How long can they sit in the balcony at the Bijou?

But the teachers were really glad when the whole thing was over and Mayor Bowron unlocked the jail and let them out.

Symington Speaks Mind to Armed Services Committee; Says 70-Group Air Force Most Important Defense Measure Today; Morse Criticizes Lack of Unification

Says DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON, April 13—Secretary for Air Stuart Symington reversed his stand on universal military training when he faced the Senate armed services committee behind closed doors the other day, and made a desperate plea instead for a strong air force. His boss, Defense Secretary Forrestal, scowled on and said little.

The meeting was of vital interest to every man who may have to serve in the armed forces, and to every other American concerned with the defense of his country. For the first time in a recent Senate committee hearing, Forrestal gave his subordinate, the head of the air forces, free reign to speak out. Symington made the most of it.

Ever since the meeting of defense chiefs at Key West, it had been suspected that Navy and Army ground forces had held the air forces down in over-all defense planning. This was confirmed by Symington in last week's testimony.

In forceful language, he warned that it might already be too late to build up the air force before Russia got the atomic bomb.

"We said three years ago that your air force was going to hell, we said it again two years ago and we say this year that it is going to hell," blistered Symington. "We say this year that no matter how you try to fix it, you are not going to have an adequate air force by the time the Russians have the bomb. It is too late."

Catching the full glare of Forrestal's withering look, he tactfully added:

"Mr. Forrestal said we could say what we felt.

"It is true," Symington continued, "that we testified for universal military training. We did that before we knew the air force was going to be cut. We felt it would be a 70-group program."

Virginia's Senator Harry Byrd asked whether that meant Symington considered a 70-group air force more important than universal training.

'Yes, sir," he shot back, "and I can go farther than that. I think it is the most important thing that has been presented to this committee from the standpoint of military preparedness."

70 Group Too Low

General "Toughy" Spaatz, retiring air chief of staff, broke in:

"You can't win a war with 70 groups, but you can prevent the enemy from winning with 70 groups."

On the other hand, Spaatz warned, Forrestal's proposal for only 55 groups would leave the country dangerously shorthanded.

Senator Ed Robertson, Wyoming Republican, suggested that the committee would need more information to sell a 70-group air force to the public. Symington snapped back that the public was already sold on it.

"We want to be sure the people are not over-sold," broke in Chairman Chan Gurney of South Dakota, who has echoed Forrestal.

Symington pointed out that the air force was seeking no more than it had been insisting on for three years, whereas the other two services were taking advantage of the crisis-fanned hysteria to increase their demands.

"The air force is in desperate shape," he pleaded. "For three years we have appealed to modernize, not on a mobilization plan but on a peacetime plan. In the last two years our appeal has never even gotten to the Congress. At least Mr. Forrestal is letting us discuss it today."

No Unification Yet

The conflict between Forrestal and Symington finally got under the skin of Senator Wayne Morse, outspoken Oregon Republican.

"We have to get the chiefs of staff to agree on a unified program for total national defense," he reminded the defense chiefs, "and now the air force is going in one direction and the Army in another and the Navy in another. I am not convinced that you know exactly what you are doing."

"Unification is something that isn't going to be accomplished by waving a wand," shot back Forrestal. "There is no miracle involved. It will take a long, long time."

Then he added: "We are in the process now."

"I understand that persisted Morse, "but you want us to pass some legislation which in my opinion we don't have a prayer's chance of passing in this combined legislation. If you think we can bring out of the committee a bill combining UMT or the draft, you're licked before you even get started."

Even Chairman Gurney chimed in his agreement.

"As long as Senator Morse has brought this subject up," he declared, "I will lay this on the line also, that I agree with him completely. You cannot have these bills in one package unless you all pull in the same direction."

The only other objection was raised by Georgia Democrat Dick Russell, who rebelled against a proposal to build more B-29 superfortresses.

"We are getting ready to spend a lot of money on a lot of obsolete equipment," he fumed. "I am very apprehensive that by the time the Russians get the bomb we will wake up here with a lot of equipment that we have purchased at tremendous expense that will be obsolete."

Symington assured him that the B-29s would be a new, improved version.

Note 1—Later, Army Secretary Kenneth Royall told the armed services committee that a 70-group air force might be necessary in case of immediate danger, but that universay training would be more valuable in the long-range view. Under questioning, he contradicted some of the storm warnings his own department has been putting out and testified that he saw no immediate probability of war.

Note 2—The joint chiefs of staff have promised the senate to come back with a final recommendation in the debate between air power and manpower today.

Martin's Part In Mine Strike Maneuver Frowned On By Many

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, April 13—Comedy or tragedy?

For 29 days the nation's coal mines are closed by concerted action of mine union leaders.

Although the federal law provides for a mediation and conciliation service, the miners' union refuses to accept its services.

All efforts of the Secretary of Labor and the other executive agencies of the government to bring and end to the strike are of no avail.

John L. Lewis solemnly tells a federal court that the miners' work stoppage is a spontaneous affair and denies that when he sent them world about the coal operators "dishonoring" the contract this was tantamount to an order to strike.

Industry feels the pinch. Steel plants close down. The entire national economy and particularly transportation is affected.

A federal judge issues an order on John L. Lewis and the miners' union on April 3rd to stop the strike and it is served on April 5th.

For nine days Mr. Lewis and the mine union officials have an opportunity to obey the court order, but they don't.

Then, all of a sudden, on Capitol Hill from the office of the Speaker of the House of Representatives comes an announcement that after eleven minutes of conference Mr. Lewis and the representative of the operators have agreed on the naming of a third trustee in the pension dispute—the only real issue.

The public is asked to believe that only the miraculous powers of magic of Joseph W. Martin, Speaker of the House, brought the parties together and in eleven minutes accomplished what President Truman and Cyrus Ching, director of the U. S. Mediation and Conciliation Service, couldn't do in three and a half weeks while the country suffered a tragic loss in production.

Clever Mr. Lewis! He put into the hands of a Republican, Speaker Martin, a means of discrediting or humiliating by inference President Truman and the executive agencies. Mr. Lewis knew what he was doing—he thought it would enhance Mr. Martin's chances for the presidential nomination of the Republican Party and give the people generally the impression that the Republican leadership in Congress could settle the coal strike and the Democratic President could not.

Speaker Martin is a likeable person but the moment he agreed to be party to John Lewis' schemes, he lost ground with many disinterested persons who care more for court procedures and respect for the laws written by Congress than they do for politics.

Mr. Martin should have turned Mr. Lewis over to the U. S. Mediation Service, whose legal duty it is to arrange for mediation. Mr. Martin should have insisted that Mr. Lewis obey the order of the Federal Court at once before entering into a scheme to help Mr. Lewis get out of an uncomfortable position.

The theory that Mr. Martin knew nothing about the matter till he met with both sides at 11 o'clock last Saturday morning is too fantastic to be accepted. Somewhere along the line emissaries or intermediaries must have let it be known that if a certain step were taken, Mr. Lewis would be grateful and would agree to call off the strike.

But the compromise settlement, important as it is for the country, could have been achieved by obedience to the court order which was a prerequisite to any settlement.

What has been a game of comedy may turn out, however, to be a tragedy for the miners' union. The order of the court has been disobeyed. There is a penalty for that kind of disobedience. If the first penalty imposed a year ago—a large fine—did not obtain respect for the courts, a second penalty upon conviction would have to be viewed in the light of whether it is sufficiently severe to prevent a third offense.

On June 30th next, the present contract between the miners and the operators expires. Will there be another coal strike, another petition for an injunction and another disregard of the restraining order of a federal court? Why does the law of the land come down so heavily on the monopolists who happen to be employers and let huge labor organizations go free when they are dominated by a man who likes to have the public believe he is bigger than the government itself?

The trial on contempt charges will be watched by the American people to determine whether there is such a thing as "equal justice under law."

Help Yourself, Mr. Stalin? Roosevelt, Churchill Agreed

By SAMUEL B. PETTENGILL

Has Stalin gone beyond the point where Roosevelt and Churchill agreed he could go? That question may startle you, but before you rush hell-bent into another war, you would find some startling answers in the book, WHERE ARE WE HEADING?, by former Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles.

When Churchill and Stalin had their first meeting in Moscow, after the Hitler-Stalin deal fell through, "Great Britain recognized the predominant interest of the Soviet Union in Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Rumania, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria. Read 'em and weep). Reciprocally, the Soviet Union recognized the predominant interest of Great Britain in Greece." These agreements "were tacitly accepted by the United States at Moscow in October 1943, and at the Teheran Conference in the following month. They were, of course, recognized at the conference at Yalta in 1945." Hull was at Moscow; Roosevelt, at Teheran and Yalta. This is what Mr. Welles says we agreed to.

If Welles correctly states the true Roosevelt policy toward Russia President Truman and Stalin should have another talk before pulling the trigger.

Saw No Fear Of Communism

I quote further: "The insane delusion that democracy and communism cannot simultaneously exist in the world is rampant." Wallace would certainly say "amen" to that. Wallace hasn't changed. "Roosevelt said to me in so many words, 'We won't get any strong international organization unless we can find the way by which the Soviet Union and the United States can work together to build it up as the years go by.' That to him was the key issue."

"Franklin Roosevelt saw no need to fear Communism if an international organization existed." According to Welles, Roosevelt "believed American democracy and Soviet Communism could never meet."—quite. But Roosevelt did believe that our democracy would move 40% toward the Soviet system, and the latter would move 40% toward our system.

The Potsdam agreement in July 1945 shows that Truman was then following Roosevelt's footsteps. Welles quotes Truman as saying, "He had never found a man who was easier to get along with than Stalin."

Welles maintains that President Roosevelt believed that "the Soviet Union had a legitimate right to demand peace settlements that would secure her from the danger of attacks from beyond her borders. He felt that the Soviet could fairly insist that the new political regimes to be installed in the independent nations adjacent to her frontiers should be governments that were friendly and that represented the will of their people." Czechoslovakia is "adjacent to her frontiers."

Roosevelt Would Agree

With reference to Stalin's neighboring countries, Welles does think that Stalin has violated his promise to afford them "free and unfettered" elections. Roosevelt, if alive, would no doubt agree with Welles on this. But Poland was given no right of free election when Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill carved her up. To be carved up by one's comrades-in-arms, without being consulted and inviolation of the Atlantic Charter, was a worse blow to free elections than any previous setback. This rape of sovereignty showed Stalin how these things are done.

Aside from the question of free elections, it is hard to see where Welles thinks Stalin has gone beyond his understandings with Mr. Roosevelt.

What are the facts, President Truman? Does Mr. Welles correctly set forth Mr. Roosevelt's policy toward Russia?

These Days

Herbert Hoover's Health

Some time ago, some gossip columnists were busy marrying off Herbert Hoover. For a while it was amusing, but soon it became a bore, particularly as their stories began to point to specific persons. Of course, there never was any truth in the accounts and such speculation on private matters is disgraceful.

Now, for two weeks, on the radio, Walter Winchell has referred to Herbert Hoover's ill health. Fortunate for Mr. Hoover, he has recovered from a case of shingles, which was publicly announced at the end of last summer when it hit him, after long trips by airplane to Europe, Asia and South America. The shingles were unpleasant and for a time Mr. Hoover found it difficult to use his right arm, which had been affected. That was months ago, although Mr. Winchell just heard about it.

As I have seen Mr. Hoover often during the period of illness, convalence and recovery, I can speak of it. Even while he was troubled by the shingles, Mr. Hoover delivered three addresses to one of which he was accompanied not by a physician as was reported but by former Ambassador Hugh Gibson. The addresses, during that period, were to the Holland Society, the Sons of the Revolution and at the Madison Square Garden. He also went fishing off Florida and caught some fish. He conducted the meetings of the Commission on the Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government every month from September 29 until three weeks ago. The next meeting is scheduled for the beginning of next week and Mr. Hoover expects to be there. All these meetings were held in Washington and some of them have been hectic. Mr. Hoover lives in New York and has publicly traveled to Washington and back.

Mr. Hoover devotes himself to voluminous writing, for publication and for safekeeping. He does all his writing in longhand, using a lead pencil. Nobody ever ghost-writes Mr. Hoover's speeches or articles and although I have come across some liars and boasters who have claimed that honor, the story is not true. He uses his right hand for such purposes.

At any rate I have been with Mr. Hoover often during the past year. I have read some of the manuscripts. In a word, the shingles did not permanently injure Mr. Hoover's right arm. In fact, recently when I dined with him, I insisted on shaking his right hand for the fun of it and perhaps as a protest against the tales that were passing currency in New York's expensive saloons and vulgar bistros.

I am sure that Mr. Winchell is solicitous of the ex-President's health and that he wishes him well, and that Mr. Hoover is grateful for the solicitude, which comes months too late. Each time Mr. Winchell shows his deep concern, thousands of friends telephone and send messages of good cheer.

It would have been simpler for Mr. Winchell to telephone to Mr. Hoover or even to consult the editor and publisher of his newspaper, "The New York Mirror," who have ready access to Mr. Hoover. This is a story which could easily have been confirmed—cost, one nickel. Certainly, it has no news value and no radio value nearly nine months late and fully three months after Mr. Hoover's complete recovery.

Of course, anything can happen and when it is said that a man of 73 is ill, it is possible, if the story is repeated often enough, that the day will come when he may be ill. But Herbert Hoover seems to be unusually robust these days—somewhat greyer, somewhat thinner, but working extraordinarily hard.

As a matter of fact, his friends who are with him often, are astonished that at his age he keeps going as he does. Like Bernard Baruch and Jesse Jones, he seems not to tire. The Winchell reports have caused some to fear that Mr. Hoover has suffered a stroke. I can assure them that there is no truth in that.

This is my report on a very dear friend. I hope that Walter Winchell will accept this report. He ought, after so many years of reporting, be able to confirm the facts of a situation that seems so vital to him.

Today's Talk

Self-Effacement

The happiest people whom I know, or have always known, have been those whose interests are constantly being spread far outside the area of their own. In other words, taking an interest in someone else.

I get hundreds of letters from appreciative readers, who open up their hearts to me, and so many of these letters are most inspiring, because they are self-effacing—telling of their joy in doing things for their children, or for others. The unhappy letters are from those who see nothing in life, who enumerate their troubles and who seem to have all their thoughts centered upon themselves.

When we step out of our way to do some kind act or service for someone else, we eliminiate ourself for the moment. The returning response is one of personal satisfaction, like turning on the light in a dark room, where you are all alone. Every interest in the room then tends to self-effacement.

We learn most from listening to others. We gain most by giving. Each of us is a vital element in the vast human situation. Our thoughts and acts should forever remain liquid—forever flowing into every stream of hope and happiness. Again and again I like to repeat that line: He climbs highest who helps another up! The Good Samaritan totally effaced himself as he knelt and lifted that stranger beside the road to his own beast and saw that he was given aid and comfort. We can imagine his joy in having done something unusual, as others passed by, unthinking and unacting.

Our greatest realm of happiness is always reached far beyond our own little sphere. Every time we step out of our own self we step into another self that enlarges the self we are, so that self effacement becomes self-enlargement.

You may recall that inspiring poem by Leigh Hunt, of Abou Ben Adhem, who had a vision in which an Angel came to him, writing something down, but his name was not recorded. Then he replied:

". . .I pray thee, then,
Write me as one that loves his fellow-men."
The Angel wrote, and vanished.
The next night
It came again with a great wakening light,
And showed the names whom love of God had blessed,
And, lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest!

PITCHING HORSESHOES by Billy Rose

Every so often the papers print a piece about what a great place Broadway was in the Twenties.

Don't believe an adjective of it.

Billy Rose

Broadway during prohibition was as glamorous as a thumb in the eye, and those of us who were mixed up with it are lucky to be in one piece.

As for instance: Late one night Leonard Lyons and I were bisecting a blintz at Dave's Blue Room. The door opened and a gent with half a load on walked in. He was togged out in a camel's hair coat that the fussiest dromedary would be proud to wear.

As he passed our table he noticed I was staring at him. "Whatcha lookin' at?" he snarled.

"I was admiring your coat," I said.

"Ya know somethin'?" said the drunk. "I don't think I like ya."

"Well, that's the end of a beautiful friendship," I flipped. "Why don't you run along, sonny boy? This part of the room is reserved for grown-ups."

Suddenly Lyons yanked me to my feet and hustled me out the front door into a taxi. "Drive through the park," he told the cabbie.

"What's the big hurry?" I asked the columnist.

"The fellow you were getting gay with," said Lenny, "is Pretty Boy Amberg. He has something like fifty notches on his sawed-off. Pretty Boy usually gets paid for his work, but sometimes he does it for kicks."

"Step on it," I said to the cabbie.

"Amberg likes to do 'em up brown the columnist went on. "After disabling a victim, he usually puts him in a car, pours kerosene on the floor and seats, and throws in a match."

"It's a little hot in here," I said to Lyons as the cab stopped for a light. "Would you mind opening the windows?"

Lenny chuckled. "They're both open," he said . . . .

A few years before L'Affaire Blue Room I came even closer to joining the Order of the Ventilated Forehead. It was when I was operating a smoke-filled shoebox called the Backstage Club.

One afternoon I decided to find out what the other half of the world breathed, and went up to the Polo Grounds to see the Giants play the Dodgers. As I settled back in a seat behind third base, a pock-marked gent next to me said, "Whatcha thinka Heinie Groh?"

Groh was the Giants' third baseman — a smart little ballplayer who held his bat short as though it were a bottle, and usually hit the ball where he wanted to.

"He's pretty good," I said.

"Whatcha mean, pretty good?" snapped the stranger. "Groh'sa greatest ballplayer ever put on a mitt."

"All right," I said. "Groh'sa greatest ballplayer ever put on a mitt."

"Yer from Brooklyn, ain'tcha," said the Giant fan. "I don' like guys from Brooklyn."

I decided to needle Mr. Pock Mark and root for the Dodgers. If Groh fumbled or struck out, I'd let go with the long, loud cheer so popular in the Bronx. I figured that by five o'clock my next-seat neighbor would be ready for a psychiatrist.

But I never got around to this rib. Just as the first batter stepped up to the plate, somebody hollered, "That's him!" and three plainclothesmen lunged at the Heinie Groh admirer. Two of them grabbed his arms and the third snaked a long, blue pistol out of his pocket.

The papers that night were full of the capture of the man I was going to needle. He was a free-lance bootlegger named Paul Emanuel Hilton, and he was wanted for half a dozen murders. According to the cops, he was a bit of a loony, and whenever he got mad or confused, he started shooting. Somebody had tipped off the police that Hilton was a Giant fan and a great admirer of Heinie Groh. From then on, plainclothesmen had been keeping an eye on the Polo Grounds, especially the section behind third base.

I felt a little funny in the stomach as I put down the papers. So this was the bucko I was going to rib and have ready for a psychiatrist by five o'clock.

That afternoon Heinie Groh had struck out twice and bobbled an easy grounder. On each occasion I probably would have yelled, "Back to the bushes, you bum." If the cops hadn't arrested Hilton, I'd have had the satisfaction of getting the loony both mad and confused.

In which case, I figured to get a small red hole in my head . . . .

No siree; I can't go along with those pieces about "those were the good old days on Broadway."

These are the good old days.

Sweet Hawaii

HONOLULU — (AP) — The average bee colony in Hawaii produced 87.3 pounds of honey in 1947 compared to 36.6 gathered by their mainland sisters. The Territory's 1947 honey crop estimated at 758,000 pounds, only slightly less than the 761,000 pounds produced in 1946. Island beekeepers received an average of 15 cents a pound for honey delivered to Island ports. In 1946 they got about 20 cents a pound. The total value of the 1947 crop is estimated at $114,000 shipside basis.

PITCHING HORSESHOES by Billy Rose

Every so often the papers print a piece about what a great place Broadway was in the Twenties.

Don't believe an adjective of it.

Billy Rose

Broadway during prohibition was as glamorous as a thumb in the eye, and those of us who were mixed up with it are lucky to be in one piece.

As for instance:

Late one night Leonard Lyons and I were bisecting a blintz at Dave's Blue Room. The door opened and a gent with half a load on walked in. He was togged out in a camel's hair coat that the fussiest dromedary would be proud to wear.

As he passed our table he noticed I was staring at him. "Whatcha lookin' at?" he snarled.

"I was admiring your coat," I said.

"Ya know somethin'?" said the drunk. "I don't think I like ya."

"Well, that's the end of a beautiful friendship," I flipped. "Why don't you run along, sonny boy? This part of the room is reserved for grown-ups."

Suddenly Lyons yanked me to my feet and hustled me out the front door into a taxi. "Drive through the park," he told the cabbie.

"What's the big hurry?" I asked the columnist.

"The fellow you were getting gay with," said Lenny, "is Pretty Boy Amberg. He has something like fifty notches on his sawed-off. Pretty Boy usually gets paid for his work, but sometimes he does it for kicks."

"Step on it," I said to the cabbie. "Amberg likes to do 'em up brown the columnist went on. "After disabling a victim, he usually puts him in a car, pours kerosene on the floor and seats, and throws in a match."

"It's a little hot in here," I said to Lyons as the cab stopped for a light. "Would you mind opening the windows?"

Lenny chuckled. "They're both open," he said . . . .

A few years before L'Affaire Blue Room I came even closer to joining the Order of the Ventilated Forehead. It was when I was operating a smoke-filled shoebox called the Backstage Club.

One afternoon I decided to find out what the other half of the world breathed, and went up to the Polo Grounds to see the Giants play the Dodgers. As I settled back in a seat behind third base, a pock-marked gent next to me said, "Whatcha thinka Heinie Groh?"

Groh was the Giants' third baseman — a smart little ballplayer who held his bat short as though it were a bottle, and usually hit the ball where he wanted to.

"He's pretty good," I said.

"Whatcha mean, pretty good?" snapped the stranger. "Groh'sa greatest ballplayer ever put on a mitt."

"All right," I said. "Groh'sa greatest ballplayer ever put on a mitt."

"Yer from Brooklyn, ain'tcha," said the Giant fan. "I don' like guys from Brooklyn."

I decided to needle Mr. Pock Mark and root for the Dodgers. If Groh fumbled or struck out, I'd let go with the long, loud cheer so popular in the Bronx. I figured that by five o'clock my next-seat neighbor would be ready for a psychiatrist.

But I never got around to this rib. Just as the first batter stepped up to the plate, somebody hollered, "That's him!" and three plainclothesmen lunged at the Heinie Groh admirer. Two of them grabbed his arms and the third snaked a long, blue pistol out of his pocket.

The papers that night were full of the capture of the man I was going to needle. He was a free-lance bootlegger named Paul Emanuel Hilton, and he was wanted for half a dozen murders. According to the cops, he was a bit of a loony, and whenever he got mad or confused, he started shooting. Somebody had tipped off the police that Hilton was a Giant fan and a great admirer of Heinie Groh. From then on, plainclothesmen had been keeping an eye on the Polo Grounds, especially the section behind third base.

I felt a little funny in the stomach as I put down the papers. So this was the bucko I was going to rib and have ready for a psychiatrist by five o'clock.

That afternoon Heinie Groh had struck out twice and bobbled an easy grounder. On each occasion I probably would have yelled, "Back to the bushes, you bum." If the cops hadn't arrested Hilton, I'd have had the satisfaction of getting the loony both mad and confused.

In which case, I figured to get a small red hole in my head . . . .

No siree; I can't go along with those pieces about "those were the good old days on Broadway."

These are the good old days.

Stomach Distress Is Gone After Ten Years of Suffering

One man recently stated that for 10 years he felt like he had a brick in his stomach. This feeling was due to the lump of undigested food he always had inside of him. He was weak, worn out, headachy, swollen with gas and terribly constipated. Recently he started taking INNER-AID and says the feeling like a brick in his stomach disappeared the second day. Bowels are regular now, gas and headaches are gone and he feels like a new man.

INNER-AID is the new formula of 12 Juices from Nature's Plants. It has relieved many people who had never been really helped before by any medicine. Taken shortly before meals it mixes with your food, thus eliminating the poisons that foster stomach trouble. It will cleanse, enliven liver and remove old bile from the system. So don't go on suffering! Get INNER-AID. Sold by all drug stores.—Advertisement.

Sweet Hawaii

HONOLULU — (AP) — The average bee colony in Hawaii produced 87.3 pounds of honey in 1947 compared to 36.6 gathered by their mainland sisters. The Territory's 1947 honey crop estimated at 758,000 pounds, only slightly less than the 761,000 pounds produced in 1946. Island beekeepers received an average of 15 cents a pound for honey delivered to Island ports. In 1946 they got about 20 cents a pound. The total value of the 1947 crop is estimated at $114,000 shipside basis.

High! Or Low In Mind!

BANGOR, Me. (AP) — The man couldn't make up his mind whether to plead guilty or innocent to a charge of intoxication. Pressed by Municipal Court Judge Harold A. Towle, he scratched his head and finally replied:

"It's hard to say, Judge, I was betwixt and between." On a promise of future sobriety, he was given a suspended jail sentence.

Rev. Kilkenny Performs Ceremony

Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Schonter, 218 Emily Street, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Geraldine Patricia Schonter, to John William Richards, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Richards, Annan Knolls.

The double ring ceremony was solemnized before members of the immediate families at 11 o'clock April 10 in St. Patrick's Catholic Church rectory, with Rev. Lawrence Kilkenny officiating.

Since his discharge he has returned to the university where he is majoring in Business and Public Administration.

P-T Council To Sponsor Arabian Nights Here In May

The English ballerina, Lilian de L'Aire, will dance the leading roles in the new version of the centuries-old play.

When the L'Aire home was destroyed by bombing, Lilian and her parents went to Toronto, Canada, where she soon became soloist for the Canadian Ballet. Miss de L'Aire went to New York three years ago. She has appeared with the New York City Center Opera Company, the San Carol Opera Company, the Radio City Music Hall ballet and in the Equity Liberty Theater production of "Peer Gynt" last winter in New York.

Four Youths Found Not Guilty In Court

Four youths were found not guilty of disorderly conduct by Magistrate Frank A. Perdew in Police Court. The youths were reported to have moved the Marine recruiting sign from in front of the post office, causing a "loud noise."

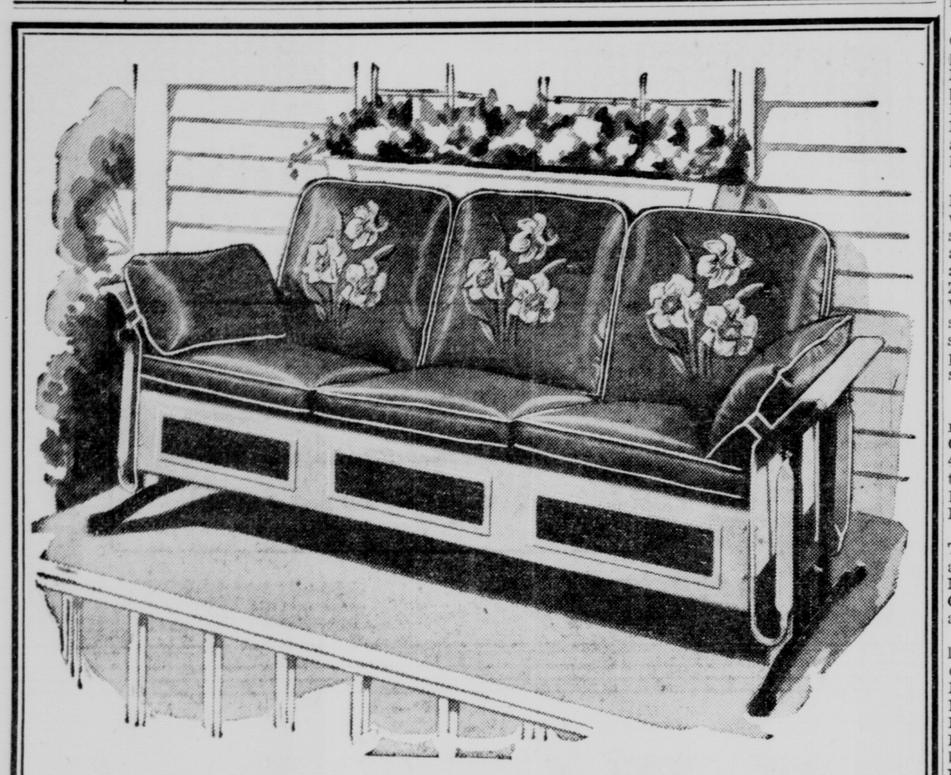

The youths were booked as Carl L. Jones, 1016 Ella Avenue; Hugh Boyer, Route 1; Patrick Dentinger, 109 Decatur Street and Richard Newhouse, 212 Davidson Street.

Another youth, Francis McIntosh, 16 South Lee Street, paid a $5 fine after testifying that he was intoxicated and did not know who struck him during a fight on Virginia Avenue. Victor Coffman denied the accusation and was acquitted, while his brother, Paul Coffman and Jackson D. McDaniel, 17 Perry Street, Ridgeley, forfeited $10 bond upon failing to appear in court.

Magistrate Dismisses Traffic Case Charge

Magistrate Frank A. Perdew in Police Court dismissed a careless driving charge against David L. Snyder, 601 North Mechanic Street.

The charge came out of a two-car collision at Park and Harrison Streets on March 21, when Betty Dolly, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Borden Dolly, LaVale, suffered a compound fracture of the skull. She is still a patient at the Allegany Hospital.

Advice To The Lovelorn

To Marry Merely For Sake Of Acquiring Mate Is Dangerous Business

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

The many girls who write me that they are worried about being "old maids" will doubtless be interested in a new novel which discusses the subject with considerable grimness.

The book, which is called "The Pleasant Morning Light" and is written by Josephine Lawrence, has not one, but three heroines, and all three, as the story opens, are making themselves thoroughly miserable because there are no eligible men on their horizons. All of them have jobs. One is a secretary; another works in the beauty parlor of a department store, and the third has a job in a bank. None of them has any interest in developing her work into a career. Its only function is to earn them needed money until they can find husbands to take over that chore for them.

Practically their whole lives revolve around this business of getting a husband. Apparently they think of nothing else, and they certainly talk of nothing else. All their older relatives and friends, moreover, are continually urging them not to be fussy about men but to take what they can get, because, they contend, even a bad husband is better than none. They add the ominous warning that if they remain unmarried, they are bound to be neurotics and objects of pity to everyone.

The result of all this is that one girl ends up a suicide because life with the man she married is unendurable. Another acquires a husband who has been twice divorced already because he is an incurable philanderer. The third has a little better time of it because she was lucky enough to have a decent, if dull, man fall in love with her though she married him without returning his love.

What Miss Lawrence's book seems to be trying to prove is that to marry merely for the sake of acquiring a husband is dangerous business, and she is certainly right. Where I think she is wrong - although some of those unmarried girls I mentioned in the beginning may not agree with me — is in picturing practically every feminine creature not only as the victim of a distorted philosophy about marriage but as so incessantly preoccupied with it that they can talk of nothing else. To the best of my recollection, only one quite minor character - one of the girls who works in the bank - ever raises a timid voice to point out that single blessedness may possibly have a few compensations of its own.

I believe Miss Lawrence's major premise to be gross exaggeration.

I am quite sure that most modern girls in their twenties, even though unmarried, do have enough vitality to take an active interest in quite a variety of things, and do not spend all their time worrying about becoming neurotic old maids.

I further think that the neurotic old maid character in Miss Lawrence's book is straight out of the Gay Nineties rather than a 1948 model of a single woman.

Obviously, the experience of marriage, if it is a successful one, is a highly desirable part of life. But modern life is so full of so many other interesting things that it is downright needless, as well as tragic, if a girl's point of view becomes so distorted that she would rather be unhappy with a drunken or unfaithful husband than happy by herself.

What everyone wants out of life is happiness, and it is perfectly possible for any woman to have a full, rich and satisfying life even though she never has a wedding ring on her finger.

Advice To The Lovelorn

To Marry Merely For Sake Of Acquiring Mate Is Dangerous Business

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

The many girls who write me that they are worried about being "old maids" will doubtless be interested in a new novel which discusses the subject with considerable grimness.

The book, which is called "The Pleasant Morning Light" and is written by Josephine Lawrence, has not one, but three heroines, and all three, as the story opens, are making themselves thoroughly miserable because there are no eligible men on their horizons. All of them have jobs. One is a secretary; another works in the beauty parlor of a department store, and the third has a job in a bank. None of them has any interest in developing her work into a career. Its only function is to earn them needed money until they can find husbands to take over that chore for them.

Practically their whole lives revolve around this business of getting a husband. Apparently they think of nothing else, and they certainly talk of nothing else. All their older relatives and friends, moreover, are continually urging them not to be fussy about men but to take what they can get, because, they contend, even a bad husband is better than none. They add the ominous warning that if they remain unmarried, they are bound to be neurotics and objects of pity to everyone.

The result of all this is that one girl ends up a suicide because life with the man she married is unendurable. Another acquires a husband who has been twice divorced already because he is an incurable philanderer. The third has a little better time of it because she was lucky enough to have a decent, if dull, man fall in love with her though she married him without returning his love.

What Miss Lawrence's book seems to be trying to prove is that to marry merely for the sake of acquiring a husband is dangerous business, and she is certainly right. Where I think she is wrong - although some of those unmarried girls I mentioned in the beginning may not agree with me — is in picturing practically every feminine creature not only as the victim of a distorted philosophy about marriage but as so incessantly preoccupied with it that they can talk of nothing else. To the best of my recollection, only one quite minor character - one of the girls who works in the bank - ever raises a timid voice to point out that single blessedness may possibly have a few compensations of its own.

I believe Miss Lawrence's major premise to be gross exaggeration.

I am quite sure that most modern girls in their twenties, even though unmarried, do have enough vitality to take an active interest in quite a variety of things, and do not spend all their time worrying about becoming neurotic old maids.

I further think that the neurotic old maid character in Miss Lawrence's book is straight out of the Gay Nineties rather than a 1948 model of a single woman.

Obviously, the experience of marriage, if it is a successful one, is a highly desirable part of life. But modern life is so full of so many other interesting things that it is downright needless, as well as tragic, if a girl's point of view becomes so distorted that she would rather be unhappy with a drunken or unfaithful husband than happy by herself.

What everyone wants out of life is happiness, and it is perfectly possible for any woman to have a full, rich and satisfying life even though she never has a wedding ring on her finger.

BROADWAY

By DANTON WALKER

Cafe Cavalcade

Soon after the turn of the century Gotham's theatres and restaurants, keeping pace with the inexorable northward flow of business and social life, pulled up stakes in the Union Square sector and drifted uptown. For a few brief years the Gay White Way—so named by an outdoor advertising man, O. J. Gude—was centered around Madison Square. Then it moved on to Herald Square and, by 1910, that stretch of Broadway between 34th and 42nd Streets was affectionately known as Mazda Alley. In those eight blocks were concentrated the city's best theatres—the Casino, Empire, Maxine Elliot's, Hammerstein's, the Broadway, the 39th St. and the Garrick, also the Metropolitan Opera House. In the same dazzling district were the Cafe de l'Opera, Bustanoby's, Maxim's, Brown's Chop House and the Kaiserhof Cafe.

•—•—•

The Kaiserhof became one of the town's most famous German restaurants. Opened Sept 1, 1910, under the management of Paul Henkel, it held a 21-year lease at $35,000 a year—considered sensational then—on the ground floor and basement of the Shubert Building at 1412-16 Broadway (N. E. corner of 39th St.). Furnishings and decorations were deluxe; oak paneling, lace-curtained windows, thick carpets, murals and the painted crests of the German provinces adorned the walls. At a 40-foot bar, Pilsener, Wurzburger, Coburger and Munchner beer flowed in golden streams, while the free lunch counter kept three men busy handing out salads, meats and luncheon delicacies. The dining room seated 400. Music was provided by an orchestra led by Hans Renowsky, former concertmaster to Richard Strauss. In the rathskeller, frequented by theatre folk, Irving Berlin sang nitely with Ted Snyder at the piano. Outside on Broadway was the first taxi stand where "taximeter cabs" were reserved for distinguished patrons.

•—•—•

At the "Sunday Nites in Berlin" unknown aspirants were given an opportunity to perform before Broadway managers—Lee and J. J. Shubert, Al Woods, George M. Cohan, David Belasco and Charles Dillingham—and many future stars got their first engagements as a result of these informal auditions. Among the Sunday nite regulars were Marcus Loew, David Warfield, Lew Fields and Joe Weber, Al Jolson, Emma Carus, Blanche Ring, Marie Dressler and Paul Dresser (born Dreiser), composer of "On the Banks of the Wabash" and brother of novelist Theodore Dreiser. . . . The Marcus Loew theatre chain was born at the Kaiserhof at a luncheon conference in 1911. The Shuberts, Congressman Rhinock, Sam Bernard, Warfield and Loew agreed to underwrite the venture. Henkel was invited to join the group but declined to take the risk.

•—•—•

About 1911, Henkel leased the five-story building next to the Kaiserhof and opened an annex with bachelor apartments. In the restaurant on the ground floor Henkel made history by publicly inviting women to smoke. Though this feature was extensively advertised, results were negligible. The first few nites sightseers crowded about the windows, anxious for a glimpse of so daring an innovation. The press, however, viewed it with disfavor and so the ads were gradually dropped. Henkel, then one of the town's youngest restauranteurs, had been a reporter on the Philadelphia Record in his 'teens. He became manager of Keen's English Chop House on 36th St. and remained at the Kaiserhof only two years, being succeeded by Bernard Stahl and Rudolph Oelsner, agent for imported Pilsener. When Oelsner died (circa 1917) the restaurant was liquidated.

•—•—•

In 1912, Henkel joined the Shubert brothers' organization and opened the Winter Garden, originally designed as a music hall where food and liquors were served during the performance. The practice was soon dropped as being too distracting to actors and audience. Henkel then took the food concession to two rooms above, later the site of the Montmartre, Plantation, Beachcomber and a half dozen other nite clubs—now the Singapore restaurant. On the evening before the Titanic was due to arrive in New York, the Winter Garden was sold out to society. A special show and buffet for 1,500 had been planned. When news of the sinking of the giant liner reached the theatre via newspaper extras, panic and hysteria swept the audience. Many of those present had friends or relatives on the ill-fated ship and several fainted at the news. The curtain was never rung up on the second act of the performance.

The wedding ring, among early Teuton tribes, was a sign that the bride had been sold by her father or guardian to the bridegroom.

City Seeks Lower Price For Lots

Owners of five lots near the new Naval Armory building being constructed on McKaig's Hill are being contacted in an attempt to lower the $2,250 purchase price, Mayor Thomas S. Post said yesterday.

The city recently secured an option on the lots at the request of Naval Reserve officials.

Lt. Comdr. Walter N. Hedrick, of the Cumberland Organized Naval Reserve Division, told the Mayor and Council Monday that building of the Marine wing on the northerly side of the armory will take up 52 feet which had not been included in the first plans and would leave insufficient space for the athletic field and parade grounds if the additional lots were not secured.

Finance Commissioner William H. Buchholtz said the asking price for the lots is "twice as much as they are worth."

Local Youths Sent To Texas Air Base

Gifford Maurice Grindle and Richard William Varner, both of Route 5, city, were assigned to Lackland Air Base, San Antonio, Tex., after being processed yesterday at the Cumberland main station of the Army and Air Force, according to Capt. Laurence M. Bairstow, commanding officer.

Grindle and Varner enlisted as privates in the Air Force for three years.

Frederick Newton Cowgill and Lionel Jackson Baldwin, both of Route 1, Ridgeley, signed for three years in the Medical Corps and were assigned to the Fifth Infantry Division at Fort Jackson, S. C.

Donald Stevenson Parker, 311 Avirett Avenue, enlisted as private first class for three years and was assigned to the Ninth Infantry Division at Fort Dix, N. J.

Baering Down On The News

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

The European Recovery Program indicates our dollar diplomacy is as handy as a rope on a wharf. It is helping England over a wide place in oblivion.

•—•—•

Some folks point out the English income tax is higher than ours. So are English button shoes and English voices. It is higher because they borrowed our jack.

•—•—•

That wise crack makes me meaner than the ventriloquist who threw a clink into a beggar's tin cup. But I'm glad I said it.

•—•—•

The European Recovery Plan is another installment on the good neighbor policy of doing unto others the things they cannot afford themselves. But it seems to me we are trying to keep the world honest with bribes.

Park Board May Meet Next Week

Mayor Thomas S. Post said yesterday he expects to call a meeeting of the Park Board in the near future, probably next week.

Street Commissioner Edgar Reynolds was appointed to the board in an order passed Monday by the Mayor and Council, replacing former Commissioner Myers G. Light.

Mayor Post and Mrs. Marguerite Findlay are holdover members. The latter will receive a monthly salary of $97.90 for her work with the board.

Jewelry Company Elect Officers

Stockholders of the S. T. Little Jewelry Company Tuesday re-elected officers and directors. The meeting was held in the Chamber of Commerce office.

Directors and officers named were Mrs. Cara Little Ebert, president; S. Guy Little, Pittsburgh, vice president; Robert Little Ebert, treasurer; O. M. Marquis, secretary; and Mrs. Robert W. Little, member of the board.

Flaherty Draws 60-Day Sentence

Samuel Guy Flaherty, Baltimore, arrested Saturday night by State Police after a 30-mile chase in a stolen car, pleaded guilty to unauthorized use of an automobile at a hearing in Trial Magistrates Court yesterday and was sentenced to 60 days in the County Jail.

Flaherty admitted he took a 1937 sedan owned by Gilbert Brant, 215 Arch Street, from Race Street and wrecked the machine in Grantsville. Damage to the car amounted to $225.

Troopers Blair J. Buckel and Glen D. Folk made the arrest.

Norbert Darr, Uniontown, Pa., forfeited $6.45 bond on a charge of exceeding 30 miles an hour on Route 40 in LaVale Tuesday. He was arrested by Trooper Folk.

Results Of Rat Drive Reported

The campaign to destroy rats conducted in Allegany County during the first week in March resulted in an estimated kill of 11,096, according to an incomplete report submitted to Ralph F. McHenry, county agent.

The number of dead rats found was far less than the estimated kill, according to McHenry's report, with 131 persons finding 1,235 dead rats.

Two things seem apparent from the report, according to McHenry. 1—There is a general disappointment over the number of rats found, and 2—a surprisingly large number of persons report they have not seen live rats about their places since the campaign.

The conclusion drawn from the report, the county agent said, is that "many more" rats were killed than there were bodies found.

There were 504 registered co-operators in the week-long campaign and 1,466 ounces of antu, the poison, used. Of the co-operators, 90 reported finding dead animals and 13 declared dissatisfaction with the results.

In addition to the number of rats killed, the report listed "one other animal." No identification was given but McHenry said the death occurred in the suburbs of Cumberland.

A partnership agreement was also filed for record between Rutledge Yonker, Richard H. Yonker, and Francis R. Yonker, to engage in general farming, timbering, saw milling and associated industries. The trade style is Rutledge Yonker and Sons, RFD No. 1, Oldtown.

Results Of Rat Drive Reported

The campaign to destroy rats conducted in Allegany County during the first week in March resulted in an estimated kill of 11,096, according to an incomplete report submitted to Ralph F. McHenry, county agent.

The number of dead rats found was far less than the estimated kill, according to McHenry's report, with 131 persons finding 1,235 dead rats.

Two things seem apparent from the report, according to McHenry. 1—There is a general disappointment over the number of rats found, and 2—a surprisingly large number of persons report they have not seen live rats about their places since the campaign.

The conclusion drawn from the report, the county agent said, is that "many more" rats were killed than there were bodies found.

There were 504 registered co-operators in the week-long campaign and 1,466 ounces of antu, the poison, used. Of the co-operators, 90 reported finding dead animals and 13 declared dissatisfaction with the results.

In addition to the number of rats killed, the report listed "one other animal." No identification was given but McHenry said the death occurred in the suburbs of Cumberland.

A partnership agreement was also filed for record between Rutledge Yonker, Richard H. Yonker, and Francis R. Yonker, to engage in general farming, timbering, saw milling and associated industries. The trade style is Rutledge Yonker and Sons, RFD No. 1, Oldtown.

Bob Whip Is Hopeful

Mikan Grabs Spotlight

By C. V. BURNS

If the All-American Professional Basketball League changes its by-laws to enable commercially sponsored teams to obtain franchises Robert Whip, co-manager of the 1948 Dukes, is hopeful that Cumberland will continue to play in the circuit next winter.

Whip points out that other pro leagues are made up of teams sponsored by commercial interests and a movement is on foot to have the same ruling adapted by the A-A loop for next season.

Bob says he believes a number of local firms will be interested in the proposition not only from an advertising standpoint but for the sake of keeping this city in professional sports.

"If we can muster sufficient financial backing Cumberland will retain its franchise next season," Whip states.

"Understand, I am not saying we didn't have a good basketball team this year. Our home talent club performed remarkably well against a collection of topnotch stars that played with several of the other teams. If we had stronger financial backing we could have imported one or two name players to make things more interesting for the five other quints in the circuit.

"We had the only all-local team in the league and we should be proud of the showing the boys made.

"Cumberland, however, wants a winner and it takes money to operate a winning team in pro basketball against such cities as Youngstown, Columbus, Wheeling, Altoona, and other places of the same size that might get into the race next year.

"If we can't obtain the necessary financial support from firms in this city we'll be forced to throw in the sponge and we hate to do it because it's not always easy to regain such a franchise once you lose it.

"Cumberland received a bad setback when it dropped its professional baseball franchise in 1933 after having been used to seeing a high article of the diamond sport for seven straight years and we hope that doesn't happen now that the Dukes have made a good start."

Whip said that the Dukes' backers dropped about $700 on the venture this season but they stayed right in there until the final whistle.

Bob expects to attend the next meeting of the league at which plans will be mapped out for the continuation of the circuit in 1949. And judging from reports from headquarters in Wheeling there are a flock of new cities seeking franchises for next year.

Melvin Washington's decisive defeat at the hands of Mattease Echaves, Washington welterweight, in Monday's amateur show at the State Armory did not surprise this writer.

Despite the fact that it was Washington's 36th amateur match we had contended all along that Melvin had been fed too many novices in the past two years and we figured he'd crumble when he crossed the path of a fellow who could punch.

We had been laying low on publicizing Washington too much for the simple reason that he was fighting often but was not meeting any worthwhile opponents. Many of the boys he met had engaged in only one, two or three bouts and Melvin really strutted his stuff in those easy affairs. All he had to do was hold out his left hand and the dumb bunnies ran smack into it.

Then someone tagged him "Tiger" and one crackpot almost talked him into turning pro. That really would have been murder.

Perhaps some will say that Washington was overmatched but that's untrue. If a fighter can't cope with the better boys after having 35 matches under his belt in two years when will he ever improve?

Goss, Starkey, Koelker, Catanese, Keiser, Smith, the Klosterman Brothers (Jim and Jack), Joe Niland, Mann, and Frazier held their own with good out-of-town boys when they had less than 10 fights under their belts.

Washington didn't learn a thing fighting novices. But he learned plenty when he stepped out of that division Monday night.

Rudy Zadell's feat in slugging it out with Sammy Angott, former world's lightweight champion, over the ten-round route here is proving a big handicap for the Ohioan in getting matches with the better welterweights, according to J. R. Basco, his manager.

Promoter Bob Heath can prove it, Basco writes.

Heath had Tony Janiro lined up for a bout with Zadell at Akron and Frankie Jacobs came back with a lot of excuses for not letting Janiro go through with the match after Zadell's showing against Angott.

Then Heath tried to get "Tippy" Larkin, of New Jersey, but the latter's manager, Angelo Pucci, declined with the excuse "Zadell gave Angott a tough night of it in Cumberland. We don't know anything else about the boy and we don't care to run into something that rough."

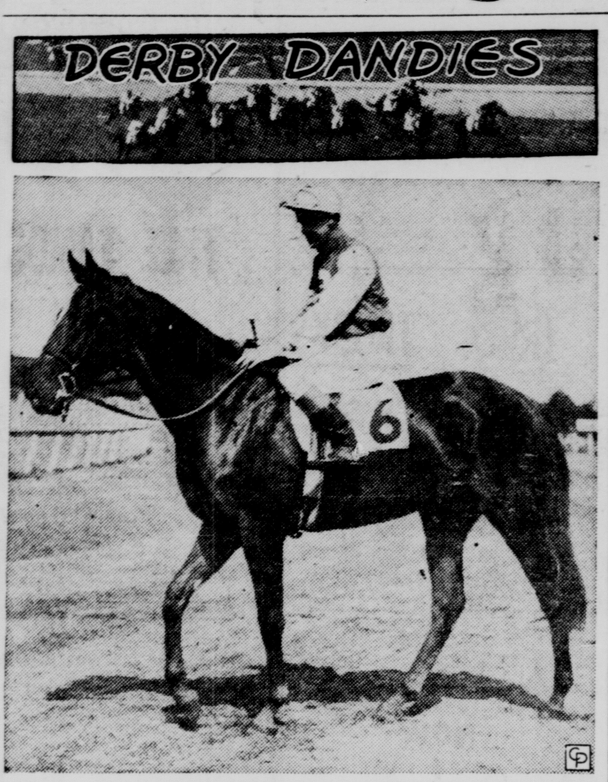

"We wanted Beau Jack for Zadell but "Chick" Wergles, Beau's manager, asked a $10,000 guarantee, which meant nothing doing," Basco declared.

The Minneapolis Lakers won the world's championship professional basketball tournament in Chicago Stadium the other night by defeating the New York Rens, 75-71, before 16,892 fans.

George Mikan, the Lakers' center, scored 40 points to raise his three-game total 83. Nathaniel "Sweetwater" Clifton, Rens' center, who starred with the Columbus Mariners in the All-American League, collected 24 points to pace the Rens.

Mikan was voted the "most valuable player" in the tourney for the second straight year.

SAGGY, unwanted as a yearling and one of the laziest of colts — he wants to eat and sleep all the time — has developed into a Derby threat this year, if anything can be called a "threat" to Citation. The golden chestnut son of Swing and Sway was bred by Greentree Farms, Inc., and sold privately in 1946. He was sold again and wound up with Stanley Sagner for a mere $4,700. Sagner gave the colt his name and proceeded to do all right after a late start. He was dropped into a claiming race at Gulfstream and set a new track record in winning by four lengths. He could have been claimed in that one for $10,000 but he wasn't. He won six of seven starts last year and was an in and outer this spring in Florida until he won the Tropical Park feature. Saggy defeated Citation, the Kentucky Derby winter book favorite by a length in the Chesapeake Trial, a six-furlong affair at Havre De Grace on Monday.

Racing Stewards Will Investigate Claim Of Arcaro

Eddie Says Citation Was Bumped By Hefty

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md. April 13 (AP)—The argument over Saggy's upset win in the Chesapeake Trial reached such a pitch today that track stewards decided to investigate Jockey Eddie Arcaro's claim that he was carried wide by another entry.

Arcaro exchanged bitter words with Jockey Carson Kirk in the riders' quarters immediately after the race. He claimed Kirk deliberately bumped Citation with Hefty and forced him so far toward the outer rail that it cost the Calumet star the race.

"I was watching Kirk's horse for an opportunity to get through on the far turn, because I was looking for an opportunity to get through on the inside," Arcaro said. "Hefty didn't show any sign of wanting to bear out until I pulled alongside, then he came over hard against me and took my horse out more than 30 feet from the rail."

The stewards will get Kirk's side of the story before taking any stand.

Joseph Flanagan, the steward representing the Maryland Racing Commission, said beforehand he felt the mishap was unavoidable.

"Undoubtedly Citation was hindered when carried out," said Flanagan. However, I think several other things contributed to the horse's defeat. I believe Arcaro may have been a little overconfident; Citation did not like the off track, and he met a superior mud runner in Saggy."

SAGGY'S ODDS DROP TO 12-1 FOR DERBY

CHICAGO, April 13. (INS)—The odds on Saggy came down from 20 to 12-to-1 in Kentucky Derby "future books" tonight following his conquest of Citation at Havre De Grace.

Chicago bookmakers were chary on shifting the odds on Citation however. Most "held the line" at 6-to-5, considering that Monday's race at Havre De Grace was only a six-furlong affair.

New Jersey Increases Take On Race Bets

TRENTON, N. J., April 13—(AP)—Gov. Driscoll said today he would sign New Jersey's new racing law tomorrow, the day before the 1947 season opens at Garden State Park.

The measure, increasing the take from betting to 12 per cent and putting an additional "bite" of about $700,000 on the bettors by computing breakage to the dime rather than the nickel, is designed to increase the state's revenue from racing by $5,285,000.

Narrows Park Plays Bedford Road Today

Bedford Road and Narows Park of the County Softball League will play an exhibition game today at 5:30 o'clock on the Narrows Park field.

A meeting of the Narrows Park team will be held at 5 o'clock.

"EYES" HAVE IT AT THREE TRACKS

NEW YORK, April 13 (AP)—A horse player with a good "eye" could have picked up some extra change today by following an "eye" hunch.

The "eyes" had it at three tracks. On The Eye won the first at Keeneland, paying $4.20. Eye For Eye captured the third at Tropical, returning $5.30. Eagle Eye took the fifth at Jamaica, paying $4.50.

The Beau and Whirl clans also had a good day of it. Beauteous won the fourth at Tropical while Beau Kiss was grabbing the fifth race at Keeneland. Whirl Top was on top in the fourth at Keeneland and Whirl Thru did just that at Havre de Grace.

Turkey Hunting Season Reduced To Fifteen Days

Testimony Of Minke Results In Action

BALTIMORE, April 13 (AP)—The Maryland State Game and Inland Fish Commission has decided to stick to its regulation cutting in half the legal shooting time on doves.

The commission also announced today that Maryland's wild turkey hunting season will be limited to 15 days, Nov. 15-30.

Both decisions came after a hearing for state sportsmen last week in Upper Marlboro.

Representatives of more than 500 hunters protested the law limiting dove shooting daily from noon to sunset. The shooting period used to be from sunrise to sunset. The season runs from Sept. 1 through Oct. 15.

The regulation was backed by eastern shore hunting groups.

Testimony by Regional Game Warden Joe Minke of Cumberland was instrumental in reducing the turkey season. Minke estimated there are not more than 300 birds in the entire state.

Peggy Kirk Advances In North-South Golf

PINEHURST, N. C., April 13 (AP)—Medalist Peggy Kirk of Findlay, Ohio, led the field into the second round of the 46th annual North and South womens golf tournament here today, defeating Jane Martin, Pittsburgh, 5 and 4.

Louise Suggs of Atlanta, the runner-up a year ago and favorite this time, advanced with a 9 and 7 victory over Anne Hotchkiss, Pinehurst.

Mrs. J. A. Page Jr., of Chapel Hill, a seven-time winner, moved ahead with a 5 and 4 conquest of Mrs. J. P. Trouchaud, Washington, D. C.

Fort Hill Rifle Champs To Vie For State Title

Postal Shoot Is Set For LaVale Thursday

The Fort Hill Rifle Club, champions of the Western Maryland Rifle Club, have entered the National Rifle Association Gallery State Rifle Championship Shoot and will fire in this event on the LaVale range Thursday, at 8 p. m.

It's a postal match with each team in the state firing on its own range and reporting the results to national headquarters of the NRA in Washington, D. C.

Each team comprises six men—a coach, captain and four who do the firing. Members of the Fort Hill firing squad are Frank Simpson, Charles Simpson, William Elgin and Norman O. White. Merle Shumaker is captain and George Weatherholtz is coach.

The course of fire for the titular affair is 20 rounds prone and 20 rounds off-hand. Iron or telescope sights may be used. Harry Morgan of Frostburg will be the referee at Thursday's event in LaVale.

Fort Hill proved to be the class of the Western Maryland league which was composed of seven teams.

Cincinnati Reds Continue To Roll Over Opposition

Defeat Red Sox, 8-6; Dickson Blanks Cubs

By International News Service

The Cincinnati Reds, relegated to an "also-ran" position in pre-season ratings of the National League race, continue to steamroller over the opposition in spring training games.

Tuesday the Reds picked on the Boston Red Sox, co-favorites for the American League flag, and rapped the Boston lads, 8 to 6. Mickey Harris, Red Sox "question mark" southpaw, was clipped for seven of the runs. Both teams got 15 hits.

Murry Dickson, who pitched a no-hitter against the New York Yankees earlier this year, shut out the Chicago Cubs, 4 to 0. He allowed five hits over the nine - inning distance.

Lou Brissie, Philadelphia Athletic left-hander who pitches with a heavy brace on his left leg because of a war injury, hurled a four-hit, 6 to 0 shutout against the Atlanta Crackers of the Southern Association.

The Pittsburgh Pirates were shut out for seven innings but smashed across six runs in the eighth, four of them on Frankie Gustine's "grand slam" home run, to defeat the Chicago White Sox, 6 to 4.

New York's home - run hitting Giants failed to hit a four-bagger for the second day in a row and lost their third straight game to the Cleveland Indians, 7 to 2.

The Detroit Tigers and St. Louis Browns batted out double-figure scores against a pair of minor league teams. The Brownies clubbed the Wichita Falls team, 10 to 2. The Tigers smashed Nashville, 12 to 2, in eight innings.

The Washington Senators and Philadelphia Phillies got ten hits each but the Senators made their hits more effective and won, 7 to 4.

Wagering At Bowie Is Off 5.14 Per Cent

BALTIMORE, April 13—(AP)—The daily betting average during Bowie's 12-day spring meeting concluded Saturday was 5.14 per cent less than last year, the Maryland Racing Commission reported today.

The daily average this year was $803,027 compared to $864,585 for the 1947 meeting.

The total bet was $9,636,334 this year. For last year's 11-day meeting it was $9,132,444.

The state received $385,453.36 from its four per cent tax and $58,935.60 as its share of the breakage.

Concerning Dr. Sutherland

Even with the spring turf now acting as a coverlet for Jock Sutherland's big frame, it is still impossible to believe that the redoubtable Scot has picked up his traveler's cloak and moved on beyond.

Jock Sutherland was not too easy to know. He had more than his share of reserve. Like so many Scotsmen, he was shy or at least on the shy side. But once you broke through the crust, you stood face to face with a man you admired and respected, a man for whom you had both admiration and affection.

He could impress you as being cold and aloof. But not after you really knew him. Then he was ready to offer as keen a sense of humor as anyone could ever hope to know.

Lou Little has always rated Jock Sutherland as the best all-around coach he ever knew. Lou isn't far wrong. The brawny six-foot, two-inch Scot was a typical son of the Bluebell country.

He came along under Pop Warner, certainly one of the greatest, and from the first kickoff proved to be a football genius in the matter of defense and a running attack.

Jock had the finest running attack that football has known, and this doesn't bar Knute Rockne, Lou Little, Percy Haughton, Hurry-up Yost, Howard Jones, Pop Warner and anyone you can mention. Perhaps his closest challenger was Gil Dobie, whose off-tackle play was a masterpiece.

Jock, for years, was never oversold on forward passing. He wanted possession of the ball. "When it is in the air," he used to say, "it is anybody's ball. Along the ground it is ours."

I can still see the beauty of this ground attack, even with 140 and 160-pound backs, the speed, the blend of blocking and center passing, the forward movement of a rugged line that cut savagely into any waiting defense. "The running attack," Jock used to say, "that's football."

It is. In other years he used to talk about it to us,—Pete Dolan, Bud Kelland and a few more who sat and listened far into the night. We knew we were sitting at the feet of the master.

Jock's teams were always powerfully arrayed on the defensive side. He was hard to score on, even when you beat him, as Bernie Bierman, with two of the greatest teams in Minnesota history, found out. As great a coach as Bierman has always been, he needed the better material to beat Jock.

They all needed better material to beat Jock. No one with inferior material ever drew a decision over Scotland's greatest football son.

Triumphs, Disappointments

Jock Sutherland's greatest triumphs were over Notre Dame. His deepest disappointment was against Fordham.

Through a period of six seasons, he overpowered and cut down Elmer Layden's Notre Dame teams so that the Irish only won one game. Notre Dame was not only beaten, but none too ready for her next-week's games. As I recall the figures, Notre Dame only scored twice against Jock Sutherland's Pittsburgh teams in those six years.

There was one of Navy's greatest teams, with Buzz Borries aboard. Jock's Panthers trimmed that great 1934 Navy team 31 to 7.

Oddly enough, Sutherland always wanted to coach Navy—Navy above all other teams. "I'd almost work for nothing," he told me once, "to coach Navy. All I'd ask would be just enough to live on."

Navy couldn't see a coach who would have made Navy a football power. Navy, with Jock, would have whipped Notre Dame as often as Notre Dame could have handled Navy.

We all get blind at times, or have our blind spots. Jock Sutherland was Navy's, for in addition to being a brilliant coach, Jock was as fine a sportsman as anyone ever met, including the pick of Army and Navy, Harvard, Yale, Princeton or Michigan.

Jock Sutherland never wanted to leave college football. The college game was his game. He never cared for the pros. He was forced out of college football by the hypocritical action of Pittsburgh University, just as Chick Meehan was driven out by New York University.

Both schools picked Sutherland and Meehan to build up winning teams. Both Jock and Meehan made good. Then both were fired for making good, as Pittsburgh and N.Y.U. attempted to move into what they considered higher standards. Talk to Pittsburgh and N.Y.U. alumni. They'll tell you the story. I mean the old guard.

Here was America's greatest college football coach or not too far away from this ranking, driven out of college football because he was too good.

But Jock Sutherland is dead now so there is no other way the colleges can punish him. But something more than a brilliant coach has left the field. Here was someone who belonged in the vast arena around the top—a great coach, a fine sportsman and a game, gallant competitor.

Jock Sutherland, Football Genius, Is Laid To Rest

City Flags Lowered On Day Of Funeral

PITTSBURGH, April 13—(AP)—Jock Sutherland, great gridiron tactician, was buried today amid mourning which struck deep at this great industrial city.

Funeral services for the football genius who quit Scottish moors to win fame and fortune in an American sport were held from Calvary Episcopal Church.

The great, the near-great and the "plain people" rubbed elbows among the mourners crowded into the spacious church.

Husky shoulders which cleared Sutherland's way to his final gridiron triumphs bore him to his grave in Homewood Cemetery.

His pallbearers were members of the Pittsburgh Steeler football team—men he had coached into a deadlock for the Eastern division of the National Football League last fall. They were Captain Chuck Cherundolo, Steve Lach, Charley Mehelich, Ralph Calcagni, Val Jansante, Jack Wylie, Bill (Red) Moore and Frank Sinkovich.

University of Pittsburgh lettermen—men Sutherland had tutored in the golden era of Pitt football—formed an honor guard at his bier during the hours the body lay in state in the church.

Many citizens stood outside the church under rain-sodden skies to pay last respects to Pittsburgh's greatest football figure. The city's flags flew at half-staff through the day. The University of Pittsburgh, where Sutherland coached for 15 years, lowered its flags yesterday.

"There goes Jock—we'll never have another like him," mourned one onlooker as the cortege passed.

That sidewalk eulogy probably would have satisfied the stored Scot more than paens of praise.

23 High Schools Of Four States Get Invitations

Quadrangular Event Set Here Next Week

Fort Hill High School's second invitational track and field meet will be staged at the local stadium on Friday, May 14, William P. Hahn, Sentinel's track and field mentor, announced last night.

Baseball and football games have been held in Cumberland under the lights but this will mark the first track and field meet to be held here at night.

Invitations have been forwarded to 23 schools of West Virginia, Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland and Hahn is hopeful that the response will be encouraging.

These Schools Invited

Among the schools invited are Ridgeley, Keyser, Fort Ashby, Elk Garden, Piedmont, Romney, Moorefield, Petersburg, Parsons, Aurora Berkeley Springs and Martinsburg in West Virginia; Bedford in Pennsylvania; Handley at Winchester, Va; Frederick, Hagerstown, Bruce, Central, Barton, Beall, LaSalle and Allegany in Maryland.

All schools desiring to enter one or more athletes in the meet are requested to respond immediately.

The number of events on the program will hinge on the entries received for track and field, Hahn said. Relays will feature the track competition.

It is planned to start the meet at 8 p. m., and it is believed all events can be completed in less than two hours.

May Hold Two At Night

Fort Hill High School, with Hahn at the helm, played a prominent part in the revival of the outdoor sport last summer when the Sentinels captured eight consecutive meets. The Fort Hill mentor believes track meets will attract larger crowds when staged at night, hence the experiment on May 14. If the initial nocturnal event is a success there is every indication that the city meet later in the month will be run off under the mazdas.

The Hilltoppers will make their 1948 debut on Saturday when ten or fifteen boys will vie in the Handley High School Invitational Meet at Winchester, Va. The twelve event program will include 100 and 220 yard dashes, 440, 880 yards and mile runs, high and broad jump, shot put, discus, pole vault, 880 yards relay and mile relay. The program is scheduled to start at 1:30.

Meet Here Next Week

A quadrangular meet will officially mark the opening of the track and field season in Cumberland Thursday, April 22, at 3:30 p. m. in the Fort Hill stadium. Contesting schools will be Keyser, Piedmont, Aurora (Preston county, W. Va.) and Fort Hill.

Fort Hill will compete in the University of Maryland Invitational Meet at College Park, Saturday, May 1; the Allegany county meet, Saturday, May 7 at the stadium; the state meet at Dundalk May 22, the city meet, probably the last week in May, and possibly another dual, triangular or quadrangular affair.

The game between the varsity and seniors, which will wind-up spring football training, has been postponed on account of the rainy spell. If the weather clears and the field is in better condition the game may be staged Thursday of Friday.

Hopkins Succeeds Curry

Announcement was made this week that Eugene "Jake" Hopkins has been appointed coach of the Allegany High School track and field team, succeeding Foy Adams Curry, assistant principal, who has resigned. Curry has headed AHS track teams for about 25 years while Hopkins has been associated with track and field since he came to Greene Street Junior High School 20 years ago.

40 Cars Entered In Speed Classic

33 Fastest Qualifiers To Start Grind May 31

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 13 (INS)—Receipt of six more nominations today swelled to 40 the number of cars entered for the 32nd renewal of the 500-mile auto speedway race at Indianapolis May 31.

Speedway President Wilbur Shaw said he expects 20 additional entries before the nominations deadline at midnight April 15. The 33 fastest time-trial qualifiers will start the May 31 grind.

Entry of a six-wheel car headlined today's nominations. Owner Pat Clancy of Memphis, Tenn., says it's a brand new job from the ground up, powered by a new 270-cubic inch Offenhauser engine. It will have dual wheels in the rear, Clancey said, in an effort to reduce slippage and improve "handleability" on the turns. Clancey has not yet named his driver.

Other entries received today were those of Fred Peters, Paterson, N. J., with Walt Ader, Bernardsville, N. J., as driver; Gerald H. Brisko, Chicago, with Harry McQuinn, Indianapolis, as pilot; Tom Sarafoff, Terre Haute, Ind., with Paul Russo, Kenosha, Wis., in the cockpit; and a two-car team named by Lou Rassey, Detroit, with Ed Zalucki, Detroit, at the wheel of one. Rassey has not decided on his other driver.

Bob Whip Is Hopeful

By C. V. BURNS

If the All-American Professional Basketball League changes its by-laws to enable commercially sponsored teams to obtain franchises Robert Whip, co-manager of the 1948 Dukes, is hopeful that Cumberland will continue to play in the circuit next winter.

Whip points out that other pro leagues are made up of teams sponsored by commercial interests and a movement is on foot to have the same ruling adapted by the A-A loop for next season.

Bob says he believes a number of local firms will be interested in the proposition not only from an advertising standpoint but for the sake of keeping this city in professional sports.

"If we can muster sufficient financial backing Cumberland will retain its franchise next season," Whip states.

"Understand, I am not saying we didn't have a good basketball team this year. Our home talent club performed remarkably well against a collection of topnotch stars that played with several of the other teams. If we had stronger financial backing we could have imported one or two name players to make things more interesting for the five other quints in the circuit.

"We had the only all-local team in the league and we should be proud of the showing the boys made.

"Cumberland, however, wants a winner and it takes money to operate a winning team in pro basketball against such cities as Youngstown, Columbus, Wheeling, Altoona, and other places of the same size that might get into the race next year.

"If we can't obtain the necessary financial support from firms in this city we'll be forced to throw in the sponge and we hate to do it because it's not always easy to regain such a franchise once you lose it.

"Cumberland received a bad setback when it dropped its professional baseball franchise in 1933 after having been used to seeing a high article of the diamond sport for seven straight years and we hope that doesn't happen now that the Dukes have made a good start."

Whip said that the Dukes' backers dropped about $700 on the venture this season but they stayed right in there until the final whistle.

Bob expects to attend the next meeting of the league at which plans will be mapped out for the continuation of the circuit in 1949. And judging from reports from headquarters in Wheeling there are a flock of new cities seeking franchises for next year.

Melvin Washington's decisive defeat at the hands of Mattease Echaves, Washington welterweight, in Monday's amateur show at the State Armory did not surprise this writer.

Despite the fact that it was Washington's 36th amateur match we had contended all along that Melvin had been fed too many novices in the past two years and we figured he'd crumble when he crossed the path of a fellow who could punch.

We had been laying low on publicizing Washington too much for the simple reason that he was fighting often but was not meeting any worthwhile opponents. Many of the boys he met had engaged in only one, two or three bouts and Melvin really strutted his stuff in those easy affairs. All he had to do was hold out his left hand and the dumb bunnies ran smack into it.

Then someone tagged him "Tiger" and one crackpot almost talked him into turning pro. That really would have been murder.

Perhaps some will say that Washington was overmatched but that's untrue. If a fighter can't cope with the better boys after having 35 matches under his belt in two years when will he ever improve?

Goss, Starkey, Koelker, Catanese, Keiser, Smith, the Klosterman Brothers (Jim and Jack), Joe Niland, Mann, and Frazier held their own with good out-of-town boys when they had less than 10 fights under their belts.

Washington didn't learn a thing fighting novices. But he learned plenty when he stepped out of that division Monday night.

Rudy Zadell's feat in slugging it out with Sammy Angott, former world's lightweight champion, over the ten-round route here is proving a big handicap for the Ohioan in getting matches with the better welterweights, according to J. R. Basco, his manager.

Promoter Bob Heath can prove it, Basco writes.

Heath had Tony Janiro lined up for a bout with Zadell at Akron and Frankie Jacobs came back with a lot of excuses for not letting Janiro go through with the match after Zadell's showing against Angott.

Then Heath tried to get "Tippy" Larkin, of New Jersey, but the latter's manager, Angelo Pucci, declined with the excuse "Zadell gave Angott a tough night of it in Cumberland. We don't know anything else about the boy and we don't care to run into something that rough."

"We wanted Beau Jack for Zadell but "Chick" Wergles, Beau's manager, asked a $10,000 guarantee, which meant nothing doing," Basco declared.

The Minneapolis Lakers won the world's championship professional basketball tournament in Chicago Stadium the other night by defeating the New York Rens, 75-71, before 16,892 fans.

George Mikan, the Lakers' center, scored 40 points to raise his three-game total 83. Nathaniel "Sweetwater" Clifton, Rens' center, who starred with the Columbus Mariners in the All-American League, collected 24 points to pace the Rens.

Mikan was voted the "most valuable player" in the tourney for the second straight year.

SAGGY, unwanted as a yearling and one of the laziest of colts — he wants to eat and sleep all the time — has developed into a Derby threat this year, if anything can be called a "threat" to Citation. The golden chestnut son of Swing and Sway was bred by Greentree Farms, Inc., and sold privately in 1946. He was sold again and wound up with Stanley Sagner for a mere $4,700. Sagner gave the colt his name and proceeded to do all right after a late start. He was dropped into a claiming race at Gulfstream and set a new track record in winning by four lengths. He could have been claimed in that one for $10,000 but he wasn't. He won six of seven starts last year and was an in and outer this spring in Florida until he won the Tropical Park feature. Saggy defeated Citation, the Kentucky Derby winter book favorite by a length in the Chesapeake Trial, a six-furlong affair at Havre De Grace on Monday.

Racing Stewards Will Investigate Claim Of Arcaro

Eddie Says Citation Was Bumped By Hefty

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md. April 13 (AP)—The argument over Saggy's upset win in the Chesapeake Trial reached such a pitch today that track stewards decided to investigate Jockey Eddie Arcaro's claim that he was carried wide by another entry.

Arcaro exchanged bitter words with Jockey Carson Kirk in the riders' quarters immediately after the race. He claimed Kirk deliberately bumped Citation with Hefty and forced him so far toward the outer rail that it cost the Calumet star the race.

"I was watching Kirk's horse for an opportunity to get through on the far turn, because I was looking for an opportunity to get through on the inside," Arcaro said. "Hefty didn't show any sign of wanting to bear out until I pulled alongside, then he came over hard against me and took my horse out more than 30 feet from the rail."

The stewards will get Kirk's side of the story before taking any stand.

Joseph Flanagan, the steward representing the Maryland Racing Commission, said beforehand he felt the mishap was unavoidable.

"Undoubtedly Citation was hindered when carried out," said Flanagan. However, I think several other things contributed to the horse's defeat. I believe Arcaro may have been a little overconfident; Citation did not like the off track, and he met a superior mud runner in Saggy."

SAGGY'S ODDS DROP TO 12-1 FOR DERBY

CHICAGO, April 13. (INS)—The odds on Saggy came down from 20 to 12-to-1 in Kentucky Derby "future books" tonight following his conquest of Citation at Havre De Grace.

Chicago bookmakers were chary on shifting the odds on Citation however. Most "held the line" at 6-to-5, considering that Monday's race at Havre De Grace was only a six-furlong affair.

New Jersey Increases Take On Race Bets

TRENTON, N. J., April 13—(AP)—Gov. Driscoll said today he would sign New Jersey's new racing law tomorrow, the day before the 1947 season opens at Garden State Park.

The measure, increasing the take from betting to 12 per cent and putting an additional "bite" of about $700,000 on the bettors by computing breakage to the dime rather than the nickel, is designed to increase the state's revenue from racing by $5,285,000.

"EYES" HAVE IT AT THREE TRACKS

NEW YORK, April 13 (AP)—A horse player with a good "eye" could have picked up some extra change today by following an "eye" hunch.

The "eyes" had it at three tracks. On The Eye won the first at Keeneland, paying $4.20. Eye For Eye captured the third at Tropical, returning $5.30. Eagle Eye took the fifth at Jamaica, paying $4.50.

The Beau and Whirl clans also had a good day of it. Beauteous won the fourth at Tropical while Beau Kiss was grabbing the fifth race at Keeneland. Whirl Top was on top in the fourth at Keeneland and Whirl Thru did just that at Havre de Grace.

Turkey Hunting Season Reduced To Fifteen Days

Testimony Of Minke Results In Action

BALTIMORE, April 13 (AP)—The Maryland State Game and Inland Fish Commission has decided to stick to its regulation cutting in half the legal shooting time on doves.

The commission also announced today that Maryland's wild turkey hunting season will be limited to 15 days, Nov. 15-30.

Both decisions came after a hearing for state sportsmen last week in Upper Marlboro.

Representatives of more than 500 hunters protested the law limiting dove shooting daily from noon to sunset. The shooting period used to be from sunrise to sunset. The season runs from Sept. 1 through Oct. 15.

The regulation was backed by eastern shore hunting groups.

Testimony by Regional Game Warden Joe Minke of Cumberland was instrumental in reducing the turkey season. Minke estimated there are not more than 300 birds in the entire state.

Cincinnati Reds Continue To Roll Over Opposition

Defeat Red Sox, 8-6; Dickson Blanks Cubs

By International News Service

The Cincinnati Reds, relegated to an "also-ran" position in pre-season ratings of the National League race, continue to steamroller over the opposition in spring training games.

Tuesday the Reds picked on the Boston Red Sox, co-favorites for the American League flag, and rapped the Boston lads, 8 to 6. Mickey Harris, Red Sox "question mark" southpaw, was clipped for seven of the runs. Both teams got 15 hits.

Murry Dickson, who pitched a no-hitter against the New York Yankees earlier this year, shut out the Chicago Cubs, 4 to 0. He allowed five hits over the nine - inning distance.

Lou Brissie, Philadelphia Athletic left-hander who pitches with a heavy brace on his left leg because of a war injury, hurled a four-hit, 6 to 0 shutout against the Atlanta Crackers of the Southern Association.

The Pittsburgh Pirates were shut out for seven innings but smashed across six runs in the eighth, four of them on Frankie Gustine's "grand slam" home run, to defeat the Chicago White Sox, 6 to 4.

New York's home - run hitting Giants failed to hit a four-bagger for the second day in a row and lost their third straight game to the Cleveland Indians, 7 to 2.

The Detroit Tigers and St. Louis Browns batted out double-figure scores against a pair of minor league teams. The Brownies clubbed the Wichita Falls team, 10 to 2. The Tigers smashed Nashville, 12 to 2, in eight innings.

The Washington Senators and Philadelphia Phillies got ten hits each but the Senators made their hits more effective and won, 7 to 4.

Concerning Dr. Sutherland

Even with the spring turf now acting as a coverlet for Jock Sutherland's big frame, it is still impossible to believe that the redoubtable Scot has picked up his traveler's cloak and moved on beyond.

Jock Sutherland was not too easy to know. He had more than his share of reserve. Like so many Scotsmen, he was shy or at least on the shy side. But once you broke through the crust, you stood face to face with a man you admired and respected, a man for whom you had both admiration and affection.

He could impress you as being cold and aloof. But not after you really knew him. Then he was ready to offer as keen a sense of humor as anyone could ever hope to know.

Lou Little has always rated Jock Sutherland as the best all-around coach he ever knew. Lou isn't far wrong. The brawny six-foot, two-inch Scot was a typical son of the Bluebell country.

He came along under Pop Warner, certainly one of the greatest, and from the first kickoff proved to be a football genius in the matter of defense and a running attack.

Jock had the finest running attack that football has known, and this doesn't bar Knute Rockne, Lou Little, Percy Haughton, Hurry-up Yost, Howard Jones, Pop Warner and anyone you can mention. Perhaps his closest challenger was Gil Dobie, whose off-tackle play was a masterpiece.

Jock, for years, was never oversold on forward passing. He wanted possession of the ball. "When it is in the air," he used to say, "it is anybody's ball. Along the ground it is ours."

I can still see the beauty of this ground attack, even with 140 and 160-pound backs, the speed, the blend of blocking and center passing, the forward movement of a rugged line that cut savagely into any waiting defense. "The running attack," Jock used to say, "that's football."

It is. In other years he used to talk about it to us,—Pete Dolan, Bud Kelland and a few more who sat and listened far into the night. We knew we were sitting at the feet of the master.

Jock's teams were always powerfully arrayed on the defensive side. He was hard to score on, even when you beat him, as Bernie Bierman, with two of the greatest teams in Minnesota history, found out. As great a coach as Bierman has always been, he needed the better material to beat Jock.

They all needed better material to beat Jock. No one with inferior material ever drew a decision over Scotland's greatest football son.

Triumphs, Disappointments

Jock Sutherland's greatest triumphs were over Notre Dame. His deepest disappointment was against Fordham.

Through a period of six seasons, he overpowered and cut down Elmer Layden's Notre Dame teams so that the Irish only won one game. Notre Dame was not only beaten, but none too ready for her next-week's games. As I recall the figures, Notre Dame only scored twice against Jock Sutherland's Pittsburgh teams in those six years.

There was one of Navy's greatest teams, with Buzz Borries aboard. Jock's Panthers trimmed that great 1934 Navy team 31 to 7.

Oddly enough, Sutherland always wanted to coach Navy—Navy above all other teams. "I'd almost work for nothing," he told me once, "to coach Navy. All I'd ask would be just enough to live on."

Navy couldn't see a coach who would have made Navy a football power. Navy, with Jock, would have whipped Notre Dame as often as Notre Dame could have handled Navy.

We all get blind at times, or have our blind spots. Jock Sutherland was Navy's, for in addition to being a brilliant coach, Jock was as fine a sportsman as anyone ever met, including the pick of Army and Navy, Harvard, Yale, Princeton or Michigan.

Jock Sutherland never wanted to leave college football. The college game was his game. He never cared for the pros. He was forced out of college football by the hypocritical action of Pittsburgh University, just as Chick Meehan was driven out by New York University.

Both schools picked Sutherland and Meehan to build up winning teams. Both Jock and Meehan made good. Then both were fired for making good, as Pittsburgh and N.Y.U. attempted to move into what they considered higher standards. Talk to Pittsburgh and N.Y.U. alumni. They'll tell you the story. I mean the old guard.

Here was America's greatest college football coach or not too far away from this ranking, driven out of college football because he was too good.

But Jock Sutherland is dead now so there is no other way the colleges can punish him. But something more than a brilliant coach has left the field. Here was someone who belonged in the vast arena around the top—a great coach, a fine sportsman and a game, gallant competitor.

Jock Sutherland, Football Genius, Is Laid To Rest

City Flags Lowered On Day Of Funeral

PITTSBURGH, April 13—(AP)—Jock Sutherland, great gridiron tactician, was buried today amid mourning which struck deep at this great industrial city.

Funeral services for the football genius who quit Scottish moors to win fame and fortune in an American sport were held from Calvary Episcopal Church.

The great, the near-great and the "plain people" rubbed elbows among the mourners crowded into the spacious church.

Husky shoulders which cleared Sutherland's way to his final gridiron triumphs bore him to his grave in Homewood Cemetery.

His pallbearers were members of the Pittsburgh Steeler football team—men he had coached into a deadlock for the Eastern division of the National Football League last fall. They were Captain Chuck Cherundolo, Steve Lach, Charley Mehelich, Ralph Calcagni, Val Jansante, Jack Wylie, Bill (Red) Moore and Frank Sinkovich.

University of Pittsburgh lettermen—men Sutherland had tutored in the golden era of Pitt football—formed an honor guard at his bier during the hours the body lay in state in the church.

Many citizens stood outside the church under rain-sodden skies to pay last respects to Pittsburgh's greatest football figure. The city's flags flew at half-staff through the day. The University of Pittsburgh, where Sutherland coached for 15 years, lowered its flags yesterday.

"There goes Jock—we'll never have another like him," mourned one onlooker as the cortege passed.

That sidewalk eulogy probably would have satisfied the stored Scot more than paens of praise.

Quadrangular Event Set Here Next Week

Fort Hill High School's second invitational track and field meet will be staged at the local stadium on Friday, May 14, William P. Hahn, Sentinel's track and field mentor, announced last night.

Baseball and football games have been held in Cumberland under the lights but this will mark the first track and field meet to be held here at night.

Invitations have been forwarded to 23 schools of West Virginia, Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland and Hahn is hopeful that the response will be encouraging.

These Schools Invited

Among the schools invited are Ridgeley, Keyser, Fort Ashby, Elk Garden, Piedmont, Romney, Moorefield, Petersburg, Parsons, Aurora Berkeley Springs and Martinsburg in West Virginia; Bedford in Pennsylvania; Handley at Winchester, Va; Frederick, Hagerstown, Bruce, Central, Barton, Beall, LaSalle and Allegany in Maryland.

All schools desiring to enter one or more athletes in the meet are requested to respond immediately.

The number of events on the program will hinge on the entries received for track and field, Hahn said. Relays will feature the track competition.

It is planned to start the meet at 8 p. m., and it is believed all events can be completed in less than two hours.

May Hold Two At Night

Fort Hill High School, with Hahn at the helm, played a prominent part in the revival of the outdoor sport last summer when the Sentinels captured eight consecutive meets. The Fort Hill mentor believes track meets will attract larger crowds when staged at night, hence the experiment on May 14. If the initial nocturnal event is a success there is every indication that the city meet later in the month will be run off under the mazdas.

The Hilltoppers will make their 1948 debut on Saturday when ten or fifteen boys will vie in the Handley High School Invitational Meet at Winchester, Va. The twelve event program will include 100 and 220 yard dashes, 440, 880 yards and mile runs, high and broad jump, shot put, discus, pole vault, 880 yards relay and mile relay. The program is scheduled to start at 1:30.

Meet Here Next Week

A quadrangular meet will officially mark the opening of the track and field season in Cumberland Thursday, April 22, at 3:30 p. m. in the Fort Hill stadium. Contesting schools will be Keyser, Piedmont, Aurora (Preston county, W. Va.) and Fort Hill.

Fort Hill will compete in the University of Maryland Invitational Meet at College Park, Saturday, May 1; the Allegany county meet, Saturday, May 7 at the stadium; the state meet at Dundalk May 22, the city meet, probably the last week in May, and possibly another dual, triangular or quadrangular affair.

The game between the varsity and seniors, which will wind-up spring football training, has been postponed on account of the rainy spell. If the weather clears and the field is in better condition the game may be staged Thursday of Friday.

Hopkins Succeeds Curry

Announcement was made this week that Eugene "Jake" Hopkins has been appointed coach of the Allegany High School track and field team, succeeding Foy Adams Curry, assistant principal, who has resigned. Curry has headed AHS track teams for about 25 years while Hopkins has been associated with track and field since he came to Greene Street Junior High School 20 years ago.

40 Cars Entered In Speed Classic

33 Fastest Qualifiers To Start Grind May 31

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 13 (INS)—Receipt of six more nominations today swelled to 40 the number of cars entered for the 32nd renewal of the 500-mile auto speedway race at Indianapolis May 31.

Speedway President Wilbur Shaw said he expects 20 additional entries before the nominations deadline at midnight April 15. The 33 fastest time-trial qualifiers will start the May 31 grind.

Entry of a six-wheel car headlined today's nominations. Owner Pat Clancy of Memphis, Tenn., says it's a brand new job from the ground up, powered by a new 270-cubic inch Offenhauser engine. It will have dual wheels in the rear, Clancey said, in an effort to reduce slippage and improve "handleability" on the turns. Clancey has not yet named his driver.

Other entries received today were those of Fred Peters, Paterson, N. J., with Walt Ader, Bernardsville, N. J., as driver; Gerald H. Brisko, Chicago, with Harry McQuinn, Indianapolis, as pilot; Tom Sarafoff, Terre Haute, Ind., with Paul Russo, Kenosha, Wis., in the cockpit; and a two-car team named by Lou Rassey, Detroit, with Ed Zalucki, Detroit, at the wheel of one. Rassey has not decided on his other driver.

Drew Tossers Win

BALTIMORE, April 13. (AP)—Drew University of New Jersey defeated Towson State Teachers 7-5 in the only collegiate baseball game played in Maryland today.

Arrow White Shirts we have...
But numbers we haven't

In our arithmetic numbers are sizes and quantities of white shirts. They seem to leave our shelves quicker than a mink can wink.

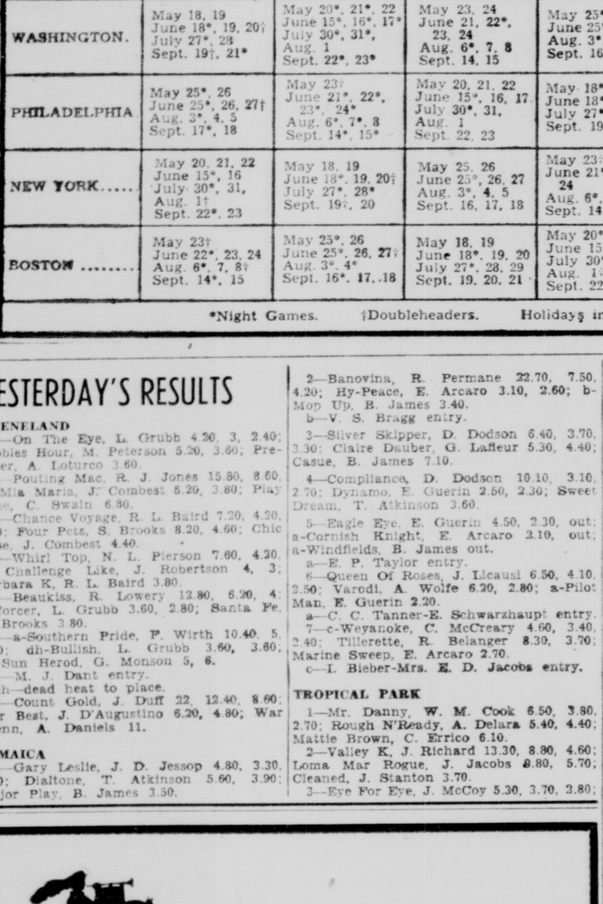

More sizeable shipments are coming in all the time, but we still can't promise all you want in all sizes.

In our arithmetic numbers are sizes and quantities of white shirts. They seem to leave our shelves quicker than a mink can wink.

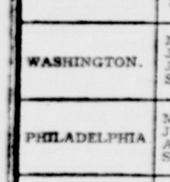

More sizeable shipments are coming in all the time, but we still can't promise all you want in all sizes.

Rookies May Help Cubs On Firing Line

Bob Rush — Clarence Maddern — Albert Walker — Ralph Hamner

Don Johnson and Ray Mack

By Central Press

LOS ANGELES—Sixth last year, Charlie Grimm's Chicago Cubs approach the 1948 baseball campaign again ticketed for the second division.

The accent on youth is noticeable in the Cubs' camp here and it is this accent which should give the Cubs a pennant contender in the next few years.

Of a roster of more than 40 men, only 18 wore Cub uniforms last year and the youngsters are battling for spots all over the team.

The Cubs, however, are still in the market for a few more experienced players and when the Windy City entry tangles with the Cardinals on its way back to Chicago next week a trade undoubtedly will be made. The Cards are in a receptive mood and Eddie Dyer, the Cardinal skipper, indicated to newsmen in camp at St. Pete that some sort of a deal may be made.

The Cub rookies dot the landscape at most every position, although undoubtedly the starting line-up will include such holdovers as Clyde McCullough or Bob Scheffing, behind the plate, Eddie Waitkus at first, Don Johnson at second, Len Merullo at short and Andy Pafko, Bill Nicholson and Phil Cavaretta in the outfield.

Among the infield rookies who have been impressive in exhibition games are Henry Schenz, third sacker, who pounded the ball for .331 for Nashville last season; Roy Smalley, from Des Moines at short, and Ransom Jackson, a University of Texas athlete signed as a free agent, also in the infield. Ray Mack, former Cleveland fielding star who couldn't hit, is on hand for protection.

Outfielder Cliff Aberson, a Des Moines performer early last year, also has been impressive in camp games. Aberson was brought up to the club last August and proceeded to do well at the plate. Clarence Maddern, another rookie, had a big year with Los Angeles last season and he also must be figured.

Al Walker, who belted the ball for .331 for Nashville last season, has been given work behind the plate and may be ready.

Hank Borowy, the $100,000 beauty of the slab corps who had trouble last season, is being bothered by blisters on his pitching hand. Borowy won only eight games last season.

The pitching staff must get help from the youngsters and of the group of new twirlers on deck, Don Carlsen and Bob Rush have appeared to best advantage. Ralph Hammer, 17-game winner with Shreveport, is another who has impressed.

Carlsen, an ex-shortstop, is a righthanded twirler who hurled for Los Angeles and Tulsa last season. Rush, also a righthander, did his pitching for Des Moines and Nashville.

Cliff Chambers, a southpaw who won 24 games for Los Angeles in '47, may be one of Manager Grimm's answers to pitching problems. Ben Wade, who won 17 for Nashville, is still another rookie hopeful.

The holdover flingers are Borowy, Doyle Lade, Johnny Schmitz and Hank Wyse.

Two regulars hit for .300 or better last season. They were Pafko and Cavarretta. Nicholson, who has been reported on the trading block several times, banged out 26 homers for the Cubs last year and packs the power the club needs to go with improved pitching.

Rookies May Help Cubs On Firing Line

Don Johnson and Ray Mack

Bob Rush

Clarence Maddern

Albert Walker

Ralph Hamner

By Central Press

LOS ANGELES—Sixth last year, Charlie Grimm's Chicago Cubs approach the 1948 baseball campaign again ticketed for the second division.

The accent on youth is noticeable in the Cubs' camp here and it is this accent which should give the Cubs a pennant contender in the next few years.

Of a roster of more than 40 men, only 18 wore Cub uniforms last year and the youngsters are battling for spots all over the team.

The Cubs, however, are still in the market for a few more experienced players and when the Windy City entry tangles with the Cardinals on its way back to Chicago next week a trade undoubtedly will be made. The Cards are in a receptive mood and Eddie Dyer, the Cardinal skipper, indicated to newsmen in camp at St. Pete that some sort of a deal may be made.

The Cub rookies dot the landscape at most every position, although undoubtedly the starting line-up will include such holdovers as Clyde McCullough or Bob Scheffing, behind the plate, Eddie Waitkus at first, Don Johnson at second, Len Merullo at short and Andy Pafko, Bill Nicholson and Phil Cavaretta in the outfield.

Among the infield rookies who have been impressive in exhibition games are Henry Schenz, third sacker, who pounded the ball for .331 for Nashville last season; Roy Smalley, from Des Moines at short, and Ransom Jackson, a University of Texas athlete signed as a free agent, also in the infield. Ray Mack, former Cleveland fielding star who couldn't hit, is on hand for protection.

Outfielder Cliff Aberson, a Des Moines performer early last year, also has been impressive in camp games. Aberson was brought up to the club last August and proceeded to do well at the plate. Clarence Maddern, another rookie, had a big year with Los Angeles last season and he also must be figured.

Al Walker, who belted the ball for .331 for Nashville last season, has been given work behind the plate and may be ready.

Hank Borowy, the $100,000 beauty of the slab corps who had trouble last season, is being bothered by blisters on his pitching hand. Borowy won only eight games last season.

The pitching staff must get help from the youngsters and of the group of new twirlers on deck, Don Carlsen and Bob Rush have appeared to best advantage. Ralph Hammer, 17-game winner with Shreveport, is another who has impressed.

Carlsen, an ex-shortstop, is a righthanded twirler who hurled for Los Angeles and Tulsa last season. Rush, also a righthander, did his pitching for Des Moines and Nashville.

Cliff Chambers, a southpaw who won 24 games for Los Angeles in '47, may be one of Manager Grimm's answers to pitching problems. Ben Wade, who won 17 for Nashville, is still another rookie hopeful.

The holdover flingers are Borowy, Doyle Lade, Johnny Schmitz and Hank Wyse.

Two regulars hit for .300 or better last season. They were Pafko and Cavarretta. Nicholson, who has been reported on the trading block several times, banged out 26 homers for the Cubs last year and packs the power the club needs to go with improved pitching.

Bullets Defeat Warriors, 66-63

PHILADELPHIA, April 13 (AP) — The Baltimore Bullets overcame a 21 point halftime deficit tonight to defeat the Philadelphia Warriors 66 to 63 and deadlock the Basketball Association of America title series at one game each.

A stunned crowd of 6,982 saw an apparently hopelessly beaten Baltimore team gather itself together and completely outplay the defending champion Warriors in the second half. Big Connie Simmons, held to an eight point first half, returned to bag 17 in the final two sessions while Paul Hoffman netted twelve, all in the third and fourth periods.

Kleggie Hermsen tied the game for Baltimore at 59 with two minutes remaining and Simmons pulled the Bullets ahead at the one minute and 20 second mark with a steal and duck shot.

The Warriors led 19-13 at the end of the first period, increased it to 41-20 at half time and still prevailed at the end of the third period 48 to 40. When Angelo Musi and Joe Fulks hit for five consecutive points at the start of the final session the Warriors appeared to be regaining their stride.

KEEPING UP WITH

HOLLYWOOD

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, April 13 (INS)—Governor Jimmy Davis of Louisiana is coming to Hollywood to be a full fledged movie star right after May 11. That is the date when his "Governing" duties will be over because the head man cannot succeed himself in that state.

Louella Parsons

But he would rather be a movie star that a governor any day, he has a contract in his pocket calling for two top budget movies for Monogram with, I might add, a top salary. The first is an original by Lindsey Parsons, "Manhattan Melody," in which his excellency will sing, of course.

The first movie Davis made for Steve Broidy, "Louisiana," cleaned up big at the box office so there is not much risk in making an official star of him.

After this fling he can make up his mind whether he wants to remain in the movies or return to politics.

Just like going home is Arleen Whelan's return to 20th Century-Fox. That is the studio where Arleen started.

Arleen's family lives here, and she was brought to the attention of Darryl Zanuck, who signed her. Since then, Arleen has had success on the stage and in other movies. She will make "That Wonderful Urge" with Gene Tierney and Tyrone Power at 20th.

Lana Turner came in from Palm Springs to go on the Bob Hope show tonight, and to order herself some clothes. She'll have to have something chic to wear at the Stanbridge Stadium when she opens the midget auto races, there May 12.

Eleanor Parker, who flew to London on a few hours notice, got herself 13 outfits, complete with clothes and hats before she left. Her baby is only a month old, but she wanted to go with her husband, Bert Friedlob.

Lana has a contract with Bob Topping and Bert Friedlob to open the races in London, and you can see that she will be an attraction such as they haven't had in a long time.

Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon gave a perty for the Val Parnells, their house guests, and about 85 of their friends came to meet the British theatre magnate.

Parnell owns 35 theatres in England, the most important is the Palladium. He told me he has to be in London by the 21st to get ready for Carmen Miranda, who opens there.

Danny Kaye, whose sensational run at the Palladium is still the talk of London, introduced Sylvia to the Parnells. Gracie Fields, an old friend of Val and Helen's, was there but the surprise of the evening was Ann Sothern, who came in with Tyrone Power, Linda Darnel and Pev Marley, Dinah Shore and George Montgomery, Mary Pickford and Buddy Rogers, Maria Montez and Jean Pierre Aumont were among the other guests.

Harold Lloyd probably will have to wear dark glasses when he gives his lovely daughter, Peggy, away next Saturday at her wedding. But Peggy will not mind, for she is so happy Harold will be there at all.

Few people know how serious the threat was to the beloved comedian's eyes. The infection started with a cold. His eyes became so bad that he was taken to the hospital, where for five days he remained in total darkness.

Peggy who is the second daughter of the Lloyds—it seems only yesterday I was admiring her in a little polk bonnet—marries Bartlett Ross II, Saturday.

Sitting at a table nearby was Rochelle Hudson and Dick (sports writer) Hyland. This looks, to me, very serious.

Tony Martin, with Cyd Charisse, at Ciro's.

Tomorrow night Hollywood is turning out for Eddie Cantor's testimonial dinner at the Biltmore hotel. He has been selected as "the outstanding humanitarian of the year." He has a lot of good friends who will be there just to let Eddie know how much they love him.

That's all today.

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — When patrolmen halted a car near here after an accident, both men in it denied being the driver and pointed accusing fingers at each other.

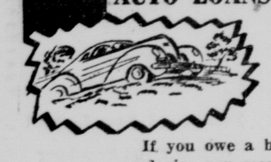

"He did it," they chorused. Police took each man's word for it. They charged one with reckless driving and the other with driving under the influence of liquor.

By LOUELLA PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, April 13 (INS)—Governor Jimmy Davis of Louisiana is coming to Hollywood to be a full fledged movie star right after May 11. That is the date when his "Governing" duties will be over because the head man cannot succeed himself in that state.

Louella Parsons

But he would rather be a movie star that a governor any day, he has a contract in his pocket calling for two top budget movies for Monogram with, I might add, a top salary. The first is an original by Lindsey Parsons, "Manhattan Melody," in which his excellency will sing, of course.

The first movie Davis made for Steve Broidy, "Louisiana," cleaned up big at the box office so there is not much risk in making an official star of him.

After this fling he can make up his mind whether he wants to remain in the movies or return to politics.

Just like going home is Arleen Whelan's return to 20th Century-Fox. That is the studio where Arleen started.

Arleen's family lives here, and she was brought to the attention of Darryl Zanuck, who signed her. Since then, Arleen has had success on the stage and in other movies. She will make "That Wonderful Urge" with Gene Tierney and Tyrone Power at 20th.

Lana Turner came in from Palm Springs to go on the Bob Hope show tonight, and to order herself some clothes. She'll have to have something chic to wear at the Stanbridge Stadium when she opens the midget auto races, there May 12.

Eleanor Parker, who flew to London on a few hours notice, got herself 13 outfits, complete with clothes and hats before she left. Her baby is only a month old, but she wanted to go with her husband, Bert Friedlob.

Lana has a contract with Bob Topping and Bert Friedlob to open the races in London, and you can see that she will be an attraction such as they haven't had in a long time.

Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon gave a perty for the Val Parnells, their house guests, and about 85 of their friends came to meet the British theatre magnate.

Parnell owns 35 theatres in England, the most important is the Palladium. He told me he has to be in London by the 21st to get ready for Carmen Miranda, who opens there.

Danny Kaye, whose sensational run at the Palladium is still the talk of London, introduced Sylvia to the Parnells. Gracie Fields, an old friend of Val and Helen's, was there but the surprise of the evening was Ann Sothern, who came in with Tyrone Power, Linda Darnel and Pev Marley, Dinah Shore and George Montgomery, Mary Pickford and Buddy Rogers, Maria Montez and Jean Pierre Aumont were among the other guests.

Harold Lloyd probably will have to wear dark glasses when he gives his lovely daughter, Peggy, away next Saturday at her wedding. But Peggy will not mind, for she is so happy Harold will be there at all.

Few people know how serious the threat was to the beloved comedian's eyes. The infection started with a cold. His eyes became so bad that he was taken to the hospital, where for five days he remained in total darkness.

Peggy who is the second daughter of the Lloyds—it seems only yesterday I was admiring her in a little polk bonnet—marries Bartlett Ross II, Saturday.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Who was the beautiful blonde with Brian Donlevy at the Seacomber's? Brian didn't introduce her, and she didn't sign the guest book, but she's a stunner, whoever she is.

Sitting at a table nearby was Rochelle Hudson and Dick (sports writer) Hyland. This looks, to me, very serious.

Tony Martin, with Cyd Charisse, at Ciro's.

Tomorrow night Hollywood is turning out for Eddie Cantor's testimonial dinner at the Biltmore hotel. He has been selected as "the outstanding humanitarian of the year." He has a lot of good friends who will be there just to let Eddie know how much they love him.

That's all today.

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — When patrolmen halted a car near here after an accident, both men in it denied being the driver and pointed accusing fingers at each other.

"He did it," they chorused. Police took each man's word for it. They charged one with driving under the influence of liquor and the other with reckless driving.

Revelers Quartet Returns To Air; Warren Scheduled

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

NEW YORK, April 13—The Revelers quartet, noted in radio's earlier network days and disbanded for some time, will get back together again on Wednesday night. It will be 9:30 via CBS instead of NBC, the network over which they originated so long.

The program in which they are to show up is that of James Melton, recently changed from NBC to CBS. Jimmy was tenor in the quartet in its halcyon days. Other members to be on hand are Lewis James, also tenor, Elliot Shaw baritone and Wilfred Glenn bass. Then there is Frank Black, pianist and arranger. He now directs the Melton orchestra.

For the continuation of its series dealing with presidential candidates, CBS expects to have Gov. Earl Warren of California at 10:35. The broadcast will originate at San Francisco.

Fibber and Molly, getting a sample of recorded broadcasting, will be the Bing Crosby guests in the relay of his transcription on ABC at 10.

By this time most ABC listeners who continue to hear the Star Theater are cognizant of the fact that Alan Young's comedy no longer is a part thereof and that the show is primarily music, with Gordon Mac Rae added. This time the program starts five minutes later than usual at 10:35.

The March of Science section of the School of the Air on CBS at 5 will concern itself with a script prepared by Norman Corwin on the subject of astronomy.

Scheduled for 10:30 is a five-minute talk from Washington by President Truman on behalf of the U. S. Security bond drive. CBS, ABC, NBC and MBS have scheduled it.

SALLY'S SALLIES

"She's selling something and this is her card."

RADIO IN REVIEW

By JOHN CROSBY

Rehearsal

At the last rehearsal of "June Moon," a Kraft Television Theater production, the director is more concerned with the handling of the three cameras, a complicated and terribly important bit of work, than he is with the actors. In the stifling, overcrowded little set, the problem at the moment is to move the mobile camera from one set to another in a hurry without tangling with the microphone suspended from a fourteen-foot boom. Actors, script girls, technicians wander around in aimless fashion as this maneuver is practiced over and over.

John Crosby

At stage center is the mobile camera, a seated cameraman squinting through a sight. It is propelled by a crewman who works a bar up and down, like a railroad handcar. On either side of the set are stationary cameras. The director warns the mobile camera to get clear of the stationary camera which is about to pick up an entrance, and the crewman pumps his handle. The mobile camera scuttles back out of the line of vision of the stationary camera. Then they try the switch-over to the set behind them. The dolly man on the mobile camera picks up the cable at left, throws it over to the right and turns the dolly. He disconnects a wire at the rear of the dolly before turning it around, lugs it in again when it is turned. The seated cameraman, cranking frantically, changes focus from one set to another. The camera has been switched from a train interior to a living room.

These cameramen are immensely ingenious and rather disgruntled that they get so little credit for what they consider the most important aspect of television. At a moment's notice they were asked to shoot Toscanini and the N.B.C. Symphony without an opportunity to rehearse with the musicians. Toscanini wouldn't work under the fierce glare of lights, so they did without. The result was a sort of classic television broadcast for which every one took a bow except the cameramen.

There is a great shortage of skilled cameramen and they work fifty to sixty hours a week. They get overtime but it's a little hard on their wives, who never know when to expect them. There are, however, a few compensations. The cameraman who handle Alma Kitchell's television cooking demonstration eat rather well. When Miss Kitchell prepares a meat loaf, three or four others are cooked before the broadcast to get one perfect example for the cameras. The others are passed around. Sometimes, but not often enough, Miss Kichell demonstrates how to cook a steak, and then every one feasts.

Studio cameras create their own problems. The camera tubes are so delicate that no two can be manufactured exactly alike. This means that a scene where the shadows and intensity of light are just right for one camera is all wrong for another. The cameramen are rather sensitive on this point, feeling the viewing audience probably blames them for something they can't help.

For the moment, at least, the director is satisfied with the camera switch. The babble quiets and the rehearsal starts again. The director watches from the one spot where order seems to be maintained, the control booth. He issues orders via microphone to the actors. Next to him is the technical director, who runs the cameraman by short-wave radio. In front of them are a sound man and another technician who keeps an eye on the three images emanating respectively from the three cameras. Over him are two other images—one showing what's on the air, the other one showing the setting of the next scene.

The commercial is yet to be rehearsed. Kraft is using live commercials rather than film, and the action is rather elementary but nevertheless must be rehearsed for an hour. A pair of disembodied arms and hands set down a tray of sandwiches filled with that delicious Kraft spread. An elegant bejeweled feminine hand reaches into the picture just enough so the audience can gasp at the emerald bracelet on the wrist. The hand picks up a sandwich delicately between thumb and forefinger and disappears. Kraft is trying to get across the idea that ladies with emerald bracelets eat cheese sandwiches; only the uncouth would be caught with caviar.

A live commercial costs Kraft $75, whereas film would come to about $1,500 and since they like to change their commercials often, it wouldn't be worth it. Live commercials are inexpensive but hazardous. An actress once got rattled and forgot a key word in a commercial, substituted another and chattered on totally unconscious of the horror she was creating. The word she forgot was Tenderleaf and the word she substituted was Lipton's.

This is the second of a series of articles on Kraft Telerision Theater.

Revelers Quartet Returns To Air; Warren Scheduled

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

NEW YORK, April 13—The Revelers quartet, noted in radio's earlier network days and disbanded for some time, will get back together again on Wednesday night. It will be 9:30 via CBS instead of NBC, the network over which they originated so long.

The program in which they are to show up is that of James Melton, recently changed from NBC to CBS. Jimmy was tenor in the quartet in its halcyon days. Other members to be on hand are Lewis James, also tenor, Elliot Shaw baritone and Wilfred Glenn bass. Then there is Frank Black, pianist and arranger. He now directs the Melton orchestra.

For the continuation of its series dealing with presidential candidates, CBS expects to have Gov. Earl Warren of California at 10:35. The broadcast will originate at San Francisco.

Fibber and Molly, getting a sample of recorded broadcasting, will be the Bing Crosby guests in the relay of his transcription on ABC at 10.

By this time most ABC listeners who continue to hear the Star Theater are cognizant of the fact that Alan Young's comedy no longer is a part thereof and that the show is primarily music, with Gordon Mac Rae added. This time the program starts five minutes later than usual at 10:35.

The March of Science section of the School of the Air on CBS at 5 will concern itself with a script prepared by Norman Corwin on the subject of astronomy.

Scheduled for 10:30 is a five-minute talk from Washington by President Truman on behalf of the U. S. Security bond drive. CBS, ABC, NBC and MBS have scheduled it.

SALLY'S SALLIES

"She's selling something and this is her card."

RADIO IN REVIEW

Rehearsal

At the last rehearsal of "June Moon," a Kraft Television Theater production, the director is more concerned with the handling of the three cameras, a complicated and terribly important bit of work, than he is with the actors. In the stifling, overcrowded little set, the problem at the moment is to move the mobile camera from one set to another in a hurry without tangling with the microphone suspended from a fourteen-foot boom. Actors, script girls, technicians wander around in aimless fashion as this maneuver is practiced over and over.

John Crosby

At stage center is the mobile camera, a seated cameraman squinting through a sight. It is propelled by a crewman who works a bar up and down, like a railroad handcar. On either side of the set are stationary cameras. The director warns the mobile camera to get clear of the stationary camera which is about to pick up an entrance, and the crewman pumps his handle. The mobile camera scuttles back out of the line of vision of the stationary camera. Then they try the switch-over to the set behind them. The dolly man on the mobile camera picks up the cable at left, throws it over to the right and turns the dolly. He disconnects a wire at the rear of the dolly before turning it around, lugs it in again when it is turned. The seated cameraman, cranking frantically, changes focus from one set to another. The camera has been switched from a train interior to a living room.

These cameramen are immensely ingenious and rather disgruntled that they get so little credit for what they consider the most important aspect of television. At a moment's notice they were asked to shoot Toscanini and the N.B.C. Symphony without an opportunity to rehearse with the musicians. Toscanini wouldn't work under the fierce glare of lights, so they did without. The result was a sort of classic television broadcast for which every one took a bow except the cameramen.

There is a great shortage of skilled cameramen and they work fifty to sixty hours a week. They get overtime but it's a little hard on their wives, who never know when to expect them. There are, however, a few compensations. The cameraman who handle Alma Kitchell's television cooking demonstration eat rather well. When Miss Kitchell prepares a meat loaf, three or four others are cooked before the broadcast to get one perfect example for the cameras. The others are passed around. Sometimes, but not often enough, Miss Kichell demonstrates how to cook a steak, and then every one feasts.

Studio cameras create their own problems. The camera tubes are so delicate that no two can be manufactured exactly alike. This means that a scene where the shadows and intensity of light are just right for one camera is all wrong for another. The cameramen are rather sensitive on this point, feeling the viewing audience probably blames them for something they can't help.

For the moment, at least, the director is satisfied with the camera switch. The babble quiets and the rehearsal starts again. The director watches from the one spot where order seems to be maintained, the control booth. He issues orders via microphone to the actors. Next to him is the technical director, who runs the cameraman by short-wave radio. In front of them are a sound man and another technician who keeps an eye on the three images emanating respectively from the three cameras. Over him are two other images—one showing what's on the air, the other one showing the setting of the next scene.

The commercial is yet to be rehearsed. Kraft is using live commercials rather than film, and the action is rather elementary but nevertheless must be rehearsed for an hour. A pair of disembodied arms and hands set down a tray of sandwiches filled with that delicious Kraft spread. An elegant bejeweled feminine hand reaches into the picture just enough so the audience can gasp at the emerald bracelet on the wrist. The hand picks up a sandwich delicately between thumb and forefinger and disappears. Kraft is trying to get across the idea that ladies with emerald bracelets eat cheese sandwiches; only the uncouth would be caught with caviar.

A live commercial costs Kraft $75, whereas film would come to about $1,500 and since they like to change their commercials often, it wouldn't be worth it. Live commercials are inexpensive but hazardous. An actress once got rattled and forgot a key word in a commercial, substituted another and chattered on totally unconscious of the horror she was creating. The word she forgot was Tenderleaf and the word she substituted was Lipton's.

This is the second of a series of articles on Kraft Telerision Theater.

Recovery Leanings Are Exhibited By Select Stocks In Day's Market

NEW YORK, April 13 (AP)—Recovery leanings were exhibited by selected stocks today although many market leaders dozed at slightly lower levels.

Dealings quieted at intervals and the string of million-share days was broken for the first five hour stretch since March 29. The total of 950,000 shares compared with 1,020,000 Monday.

Highs for the year were touched by Douglas Aircraft, which finished up 2 at 64; Grumann Aircraft ⅝ at 41⅛, Union Carbide ⅝ at 110½ and Sunray Oil ½ at 12⅛ (on reports of record earnings).

On the offside were Bethlehem Steel, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Chrysler, Firestone, Goodrich Oliver Corp., Schenley, Anaconda, American Smelting, Johns-Manville, Philip, Radio Corp., Twentieth Century-Fox, United Air Lines, Mission Corp., Illinois Central, Chesapeake & Ohio and Southern Railway.

Fair gains by a few selected railroad bonds featured an otherwise irregular market.

U. S. Government bonds were slightly lower in over the counter dealings. Brazilian issues were ahead as much as 7 points and Chileans were up fractionally on the foreign dollar list.

The volume was $2,100,000, compared with $3,880,000 yesterday.

Recovery Leanings Are Exhibited By Select Stocks In Day's Market

NEW YORK, April 13 (AP)—Recovery leanings were exhibited by selected stocks today although many market leaders dozed at slightly lower levels.

Dealings quieted at intervals and the string of million-share days was broken for the first five hour stretch since March 29. The total of 950,000 shares compared with 1,020,000 Monday.

Highs for the year were touched by Douglas Aircraft, which finished up 2 at 64; Grumann Aircraft ⅝ at 41½, Union Carbide ⅝ at 110½ and Sunray Oil ½ at 12⅛ (on reports of record earnings).

On the offside were Bethlehem Steel, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Chrysler, Firestone, Goodrich Oliver Corp., Schenley, Anaconda, American Smelting, Johns-Manville, Philip, Radio Corp., Twentieth Century-Fox, United Air Lines, Mission Corp., Illinois Central, Chesapeake & Ohio and Southern Railway.

Fair gains by a few selected railroad bonds featured an otherwise irregular market.

U. S. Government bonds were slightly lower in over the counter dealings. Brazilian issues were ahead as much as 7 points and Chileans were up fractionally on the foreign dollar list.

The volume was $2,100,000, compared with $3,880,000 yesterday.

River Rises To Within One Foot Of Flood Stage As Rainfall Hits Close To Three Inch Mark In City

Wills Creek Reported Remaining Stationary

Residents and business houses in Cumberland flood zones were generally alarmed late last night as the Potomac River approached flood stage following two days of heavy rainfall, which brought the stream from its five-foot normal level to 16 feet at 10 p. m. This is one foot below flood stage.

The Weather Bureau said, however, Cumberland probably would escape flood waters, but despite this there was general concern and many people watched the river and Wills Creek from banks and bridges. The News office was swamped with telephone calls seeking information. City Police also received scores of calls.

Since Monday at 1:30 a. m., official reports show 2.88 inches of rain fell in the city up until midnight last night. The rainfall was general in the Upper Potomac River and Wills Creek basins, and ground became sodden with water, causing a quick run-off into streams.

Yesterday morning the river was reported at 12.26, but continued rainfall caused a steady rise in the stream. At 7 p. m. yesterday it was reported at 15.30 feet and at 10 p. m. had gone up to 16 feet. Flood stage at the Wiley Ford bridge where the official guage is stationed is 17 feet.

Rainfall Stops Here

During the afternoon here rainfall ceased, and skies appeared to be clearing; however, there were showers later in the night.

Weather observers said local rainfall has little to do with creating local floods and it is the rainfall up stream which causes real concern. Rain was reported in some sections up the Potomac after dark.

At the Hyndman tower of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, Wills Creek was reported at 6 feet 2 inches at 11 p. m. The creek had apparently stopped rising there, and no rain other than mist had fallen since 5 p. m.

The creek was out of its banks between the Hyndman tower and Cook's Mills, about 10 miles from Cumberland. Water flowed over "the creek road" between the tower and Cook's Mills yesterday afternoon and the school bus had trouble getting through.

At Oldtown, water was over the toll bridge on the road to Green Spring, and the river was backing over fields, with one street reported flooded.

At points along the Potomac above Cumberland, periodic checks were made and at midnight the river seemed to be dropping slightly at Kitzmiller and Luke. This would indicate a recession here by this morning, officials said, unless there was more rainfall.

The United States Weather Bureau notified Ralph L. Rizer, city engineer, late yesterday afternoon that the river should reach its crest of 15 to 16 feet here by 7 p. m. last night. However the 16-foot mark was not reached until after 10 p. m.

On the strength of this report and the fact Wills Creek had been stationary for three hours, Rizer called in his observers on various stream guages at 5 p. m. He said if there was further danger, or additional heavy rainfall he would again call them out to man the guages, so an alarm could be spread if flood threatened.

Many Calls Received

During the day, Rizer's office received at least 50 calls asking about flood danger. Most of these calls came from residents of the North Mechanic and North Centre Street sections.

Because of flood rumors, a kindergarten on North Centre Street was dismissed at 1 p. m. yesterday.

Last night, while the concern was general in downtown Cumberland, it was not possible to make any reasonable prediction here. There was still some rainfall in Garrett County, and skies remained overcast. Many merchants and downtown residents remained at their places until early morning hours, checking the situation. Many moved perishable goods atop tables, counters, etc.

Mrs. Edith Pew, Kitzmiller tax collector, volunteered yesterday to act as stream gauge observer in that section for the first time, and called Rizer's office every hour from 10 a. m. until 4 p. m. to report on the rise in the Potomac.

Rizer's office had called Former Mayor Leslie Sharpless of Kitzmiller, the regular observer, to check the river today, but he recommended Mrs. Pew because it would be inconvenient for him to visit the stream gauge regularly.

When she made her last call at 4 p. m., Mrs. Pew reported that the Kitzmiller gauge stood at 6.6 feet. Flood stage at that point is 14 feet. She said the river had been stationary since 2 p. m.

Mrs. Pew said her home is located about three feet from the river bank, near the stream gauge. Asked whether she was worried about the rising water, she said her family never started worrying until the water started "coming over the wall" along the river bank.

Estimated Water's Height

Two members of the city engineering crew were stationed at the Hyndman gauge on Wills Creek during the day. At 4 p. m. they reported the creek had been stationary at 5.8 feet for one hour. The water was not even up to the official gauge, and they had to estimate the height of the water.

Two other men of the city engineering crew checked the four city gauges during the day at Blue Bridge on Johnson Street, Market Street, Baltimore Street and the Narrows. They reported at 5 p. m. that Wills Creek at Market Street had remained stationary from 2 to 3 p. m. following a slow rise during the day, and had then risen 1/10 of a foot to reach a crest of 17.9. Flood stage at that point is about 23 feet.

Continuous rains since Sunday caused high waters in Georges Creek and its tributaries in Lonaconing.

Monday at 7 p. m. a retaining wall in Detmold gave way where

RIVER RISES-- Robert R. Golden, local weather observer, is shown here as he checked the stream gauge at Wiley Ford bridge last night when the Potomac River neared flood stage. Normally, Golden makes a check of the stream each morning at 8 a. m., but when it is raining, he is required to make a check each six hours. Yesterday, with the stream rising steadily, he made hourly checks and at midnight declared he was getting a little tired, since he had but five hours sleep since Sunday night. Flood stage at the Wiley Ford gauge is 17 feet. The gauge at last night's 10 p. m. reading showed 16 feet.

Community Super Market Workers Win Wage Boosts

Firm Signs Contract With Two AFL Unions

The Community Super Market, 30 Wineow Street, has signed a union agreement which provides increases of about $6 a week for employes, according to a joint statement issued yesterday by Local 322, Meat Cutters Union, and Local 886, Retail Clerks Union, both AFL.

The wage boosts were retroactive to March 13 for the Meat Cutters Union members and March 27 for workers represented by the Clerks Union.

Other benefits provided in the contract were listed as a reduction in the work week from 51½ to 45 hours a week, six paid holidays and paid vacations.

The agreement also includes a Union Shop clause in which new workers become members of the union after 30 days employment.

William C. Walsh, local attorney, represented the firm in the contract negotiations. The Meat Cutters Union was represented by William Krapf, president, and Mike Roth, international representative, while the Retail Clerks were represented by J. T. Defibaugh, business agent for Local 886, and C. E. Stutzman, president of the Allegany Trades Council.

The unions also hold contracts with the A. and P. Super Market and units of the American Stores, Inc., of the Cumberland area.

Police To Patrol Bedford Road Area

A crack-down to compel motorists to obey the 40 mile-an-hour speed limit on Bedford Road from Cumberland to the Pennsylvania State Line was ordered yesterday by First Sgt. W. E. O'Hara, commander of the LaVale barracks of the Maryland State Police.

Sgt. O'Hara said numerous complaints have been received from residents of that section during the past week concerning illegal speeding by motorists, and explained the 40 mile-an-hour limit has been in force in that section for the past year.

Special State Police patrols will be assigned to the Bedford Road sections, according to the sergeant, and offenders will be taken to court for trial if troopers find it necessary to stop them for speeding.

The 40 mile limit was put into effect because of the dangerous curves and bad stretches of road, according to Sgt. O'Hara, who said enforcement of the limitation will become rigid immediately.

First Radio Broadcast Here 20 Years Ago

Twenty years ago this month the first broadcasting station to operate in Cumberland was sponsored by the old Cumberland Daily News and broadcast for three weeks, from the stage of the Liberty Theater.

The station, using the call letters WKBT, was operated here by Sidney Shepherd, who later took the equipment to Frostburg and thence to Pittsburgh. The first three people to broadcast from Cumberland were the late Thomas W. Koon, then mayor of the city; Thomas H. Burke, who operated the Liberty, and Ross Shaw, Oldtown, who served as announcer and master of ceremonies.

The Weather

With a flood looking possible, more rain is predicted for this morning, but the official weather bureau says "no flood."

It is hoped they know what they are talking about. The lady of the house is still trying to get her Monday washing done, but has almost given up until next week. The sun managed to creep through Tuesday to eke out a high of 47 degrees, but didn't have to go far, since the law was recorded at 45 degrees. The temperature at 10:30 last night was 43 degrees. The rainfall was .41 inches while a reading of 2.88 inches since Monday at 1:30 a. m. was recorded.

Class Is Planned For Lay Workers

A class for lay public health workers will be held Thursday at 1:30 p. m. in the Health Department clinic rooms at City Hall, according to Mrs. Arthur Evans, chairman of the Allegany County Lay Health Council.

Mrs. Evans announced at a meeting of the council last night at City Hall that Mrs. George Henderson, a graduate of the Johns Hopkins Hospital School of Nursing, will be the instructor.

Instructions will be given in taking temperature, pulse and respiration readings.

Last night's program was planned in observance of National Public Health Nurse Week. Mrs. Evans pointed out that 7,000 additional public health nurses are needed throughout the country, urging council members to aid in the campaign to interest young women in that career.

Mrs. Grace Wallace, Fayette Street, was appointed treasurer to succeed Lester Kolb, Flintstone, who resigned because of ill health.

The principal speaker was Dr. Clarence Velat, officer in charge of the United States Health Service nutrition unit which is completing a two-year survey in local elementary schools.

Dr. Velat pointed out that only since 1930 has nutrition become a science, stating that nutrition concerns not only the type of foods in the diet but also what happens to foods in the body.

He stressed the importance of nutrition in pre-natal care, and concluded with a brief discussion of the loss of some beneficial qualities in natural food products, such as fresh milk and wheat, by present purification methods.

Dr. Velat showed a number of color slides, some of them taken in the local survey, illustrating various signs of malnutrition.

Two Receive Treatment For Minor Injuries

Two emergency cases were handled Tuesday by Memorial Hospital, one of which was a four-year-old boy, Richard Keller, who fell on a piece of glass at his home, 212 Spring Street.

The other case was John Cranor, 443 Columbia Street, a salesman at Sears Roebuck, who caught his finger in an air compressor. Both were treated and sent home.

S. A. Board To Meet

Few Maryland Miners Expected To Work Today

Ocean Mine Flooded By Heavy Rainfall

Few of Maryland's 2,000 miners returned to work yesterday and there was little indication that production would be resumed to any extent today, coal operators, union officials and railroad spokesmen said last night.

In the Georges Creek Coal Region, a few miners reported at several pits, but when no one else appeared to work, they returned to their homes.

The Campbell Coal Company mines at Barton and Mill Run reported last night that some of their men worked yesterday, and the Masteller Coal Company mines at Hampshire, W. Va., also operated.

The Georges Creek Coal Company and Consolidated Fuel Company Mines in the Lonaconing and Frostburg areas were still idle. The mine at Ocean was reported flooded due to the heavy rainfall, and it will be several days before work can be resumed there, miners said. Georges Creek Coal Company officials here last night said their mines at Logan, W. Va., resumed operations yesterday morning on a full scale.

Thomas Mines Working

In the Upper Potomac Region, no one appeared to be working, railroad officials said, except at Thomas, W. Va. All mines east of Thomas remained idle. It has been expected that mines at Kitzmiller, Vindex, Shallmar, Kempton and that general area in Garrett County might resume today, but late last night officials said, "We don't know what to expect, but it looks as if the miners are still waiting."

All strip mines in this general area were idle yesterday due to the heavy rainfall. Most of these operations are reported flooded so badly they won't work for a couple of days.

In nearby West Virginia and Pennsylvania fields, a number of mines were working yesterday on a nearly full scale basis. However, railroad officials here last night declared, "We don't expect any full scale coal movement before the first of the week."

Heavy rains throughout the area may have kept some men from returning to the pits, but it was generally believed that the miners were merely waiting until after the contempt of court trial of John L. Lewis, UMW president, today.

A couple of mine locals in the area voted to stay away from the mines until after an inspection had been made, but mine operators believe this was something of a "delaying action." In some quarters, some miners have declared frankly they won't work until after they see how Lewis fares in court.

The agreement on miners' pensions which officially ended the "voluntary" walkout, brought rays of hope to furloughed railroaders and furloughed workers of other industries made idle by the cessation of coal production and the resultant coal shortage.

Rail Curtailment Cancelled

A second 25 per cent curtailment in the operation of coal-powered trains, which was to become effective April 15, by governmental decree, was cancelled yesterday at 4 p. m., local railroad officials said.

This means that a 15 per cent freight train traffic curtailment on the local division of the Baltimore and Ohio will not be made and Trains Nos. 32 and 15 which were to be suspended will continue.

On the Western Maryland, there will be no interruption in fast freight service, and Trains Nos. 1 and 4 between Cumberland and Elkins, will resume operations today. Train No. 1 leaves Cumberland at 7:05 a. m., arriving at Elkins at 11 a. m. Train No. 4 leaves Elkins at 1:55 p. m. and arrives here at 5:55 p. m.

Baltimore and Ohio Railroad officials in Baltimore said the 15,000 workers who were furloughed will be called back to work starting today, as each train is put on its run again.

Local Stockyards Report Light Run

A light run but a high market was reported in operations of the Cumberland Stock Yards, Inc., yesterday. The report follows:

Good butcher heifers 23-24½; butcher heiferettes 20-22 cents; good butcher cows 20-24; medium cows 17-19 cents; shelly kind 15-17.

Milk cows $125 to $150 a head; good veal calves 30-35 cents; medium calves 26-29 cents; light calves 18-22; good hogs 22½-23½; light hogs 20-21½; stag hogs 15-16 cents. Good chickens 38-40½; Leghorn chickens 28-35 cents.

Two Motorists Fined

Herbert P. Cessna, 11 Water Street, and Raymond F. Zegles, 319 Bedford Street, were fined $5 each Tuesday in Police Court on careless driving charges resulting from an automobile collision on Centre and Franklin Streets early Tuesday morning.

Condition Unchanged

Clarence R. Jones, 504 Avirett Avenue, who has been a patient in Allegany Hospital for the past two weeks, remains unchanged.

City Makes First Payment On Survey

The Mayor and City Council of Cumberland has ordered payment to the Treasurer of the United States of $20,000, to be held in escrow for use in covering the first phase of the flood control survey.

Of the above amount $15,065.22 will be taken from the "Flood Account" and $4,934.78 from the "Contingent Fund," the latter to be changed to the "Flood Bond Issue" account when sold.

Meanwhile, H. V. Jacobs, attached to the Washington office of the U. S. engineers, said that rain had held up preliminary staking out of the survey of the last of the four pressure conduits in the local flood control project.

Out-Patient Medical Treatment Given Approximately 9,000 Vets

Approximately 9,000 out-patient medical treatments were given by the medical clinic of the local Regional VA Office to State veterans during the first three months of this year, it was disclosed last night by W. L. Limburg, VA's regional manager in Maryland.

The VA official added that this service is averaging slightly more than for the same months last year. A total of 35,300 treatments were performed in 1947.

This medical activity consists of medical and surgical treatments for eligible veterans with ailments incurred or aggravated while they were in military service. The figures cited for last year and the first three months of 1948 do not include thousands of physical examinations given to determine the need for out-patient treatment, for pension and compensation purposes and for other reasons.

Out-patient care is available in most cases, only for veterans having service-connected or service-aggravated ailments, declared Limburg.

While clinics in VA offices account for a large percentage of the out-patient treatments given, many ex-servicemen and women receive such care from private physicians, hospitals, and clinics under contract to VA where VA facilities are not available. However, this contract care must, without exception, receive the prior approval of the Veterans Administration.

Officer Joseph Stitcher Undergoes Operation

Joseph Henry Stitcher, 25-year-old city police officer who was badly burned last July 10 when his clothing was ignited with flaming gasoline as he went to assist a stalled trucker in the Virginia Avenue subway, underwent an operation at Allegany Hospital yesterday.

Patrolman Stitcher suffered first, second and third degree burns about his arms, body, legs and face, and the injuries left one of his arms stiff at the elbow.

The operation yesterday was designed to strengthen, and straighten the arm and remove adhesions causing the stiffness.

The young officer has not returned to duty since the accident, but hospital attaches said last night his condition was reported good.

Veterans Administration May Investigate Dispute

Council To Seek Data On Pool Filter Systems

Rizer To Estimate Cost Of Piping

City officials conferred yesterday with a representative of the Refinite Corporation, Omaha, Neb., regarding installation problems involved in providing a circulating, filtering and sterilizing system at the Constitution Park swimming pool.

Refinite submitted the low bids for two types of systems, the diatomaceous earth and pressure filters, bidding $13,423 and $17,304 respectively.

City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer pointed out that although no swimming pools in Maryland are served by diatomaceous earth filters at the present time, cities in other states which use that system will be contacted for information regarding its effectiveness as compared to the conventional type of pressure filter.

Other companies which have submitted bids are the Permutit Company, Providence, R. I., bidding $21,400 for installation of the pressure filter system, and Proportioneer, Inc., Providence, R. I., which bid $18,173.40 for installing the diatomaceous earth type.

Officials emphasized, however, that the city is not obligated to accept the lowest bid, and that the Mayor and Council will collect more data regarding the two systems before letting the contract.

The Refinite representative, George Cunney, Washington, D. C., district manager for Maryland and Virginia, said if his company is awarded the contract it will be five weeks before the necessary equipment can be brought here, with the actual installation expected to take about two weeks.

Installation would be handled by Water Department plumbers under the supervision of the successful bidder.

Rizer was instructed to estimate the cost of the necessary piping which would be installed around the pool.

Officials said it has not yet been decided whether to open the pool as usual on Memorial Day if the filtration system has not been installed by that time.

Besides Mayor Thomas S. Post and Rizer, others attending the conference were Street Commissioner Edgar Reynolds, who with Mayor Post is a member of the Park Board; Water Commissioner William J. Edwards and W. Arnold Gunther, state bacteriologist, who was invited to attend to discuss questions of water analysis.

Group To Attend Water Conference

Four local city officials are planning to attend a two-day session of the Maryland-Delaware Water and Sewerage Association at the Lord Baltimore Hotel, Baltimore, on Thursday and Friday, marking the 21st annual conference of the organization.

They are Mayor Thomas S. Post; George M. Hitchcock, superintendent of the Evitts Creek Water Company; Water Commissioner William J. Edwards and Andrew G. Bender, water superintendent.

Talks scheduled for the Thursday morning session include a discussion of the program and accomplishments of the Maryland Water Pollution Control Commission by Paul W. McKee, executive secretary. The business session that afternoon will feature the election of officers.

Addresses Friday morning will include a talk on "Practical Design and Construction of Storm Drains for the Small City," by Thomas S. Cassedy of Whitman, Requardt and Associates, Baltimore engineering firm which has acted in a consultant capacity for Cumberland; and a discussion on "How Housing Law Enforcement Works," by G. Yates Cook, chief of the housing division of the Baltimore City Health Department.

Friday afternoon the conference delegates will make an inspection tour of the Patapsco River tunnel, which is now under construction.

The local delegation plans to drive to Baltimore early Thursday morning, returning Friday night.

VA Officer To Meet With Students Today

The Veterans Administration has indicated it will investigate the dispute between striking students and school officials at Potomac State School, Keyser, W. Va., and members of veteran organizations pledged their support of the students' protest, it was revealed at a meeting of over 300 members of the student body last night.

Students staged a strike yesterday in protest of the dismissal from school of Dortha Christopher, 18, Kingwood, W. Va., freshman, and Gene Cotrill, 25, Bridgeport, W. Va., sophomore, a veteran enrolled under the GI Bill of Rights. The pair was accused of staying out together all nibht in violation of the school's rules regarding resident students.

At the mass meeting it was charged school officials had failed to dismiss a girl student last year for a much more serious offense, when some students thought she should be dismissed. The students claim the school executives are now unfair, since the pair involved in this dispute can prove their innocence of any moral misconduct, but were not given an opportunity.

A committee of six students appealed to Dr. E. E. Church, president, and other school officials to have the two students reinstated. A petition bearing the names of over 300 students was also sent the executive board, but the boy and girl were asked to leave the campus.

VFW Commander Speaks

One of the principal speakers at the students' rally last night(was Charles Bolyard, a former student, and now commander of Queens Point Memorial Post No. 6775, Veterans of Foreign Wars, McCoole.

Commander Bolyard told the students the VFW post is 100 per cent behind the students in this action and will support them in every way possible. He said the Veterans Administration will be urged to investigate this and other situations at the school, and expressed the opinion other veterans organizations will be interested in the students' problem.

Everett Gibbs, Veterans Administration officer of the Keyser office, asked the students to meet with him in the school's auditorium at 9 a. m. today.

The students said they will meet with Gibbs, but will not meet inside the auditorium. They offered to meet him outside, and Gibbs indicated he will be on hand.

This was consistent with the students' action yesterday when Vernon E. Rankin, Mineral County prosecutor, appeared and asked the students to go into the assembly hall. They refused and Rankin produced a law book and read:

"Any person, or persons, who willfully interrupt molest or disturb, any free school or other school," are subject to prosecution. Rankin said fine upon conviction is $10 to $50 along with possible jail sentence of 30 days for each offense.

Rankin said he had been called to the school by school authorities, as prosecuting attorney for the county and not as attorney for the school. He said if there are violations, or if formal complaints are made, he will take necessary action to prosecute.

Want No Disorder

Among the students who spoke at the rally were several who emphasized the point that "this is not a veterans battle, and the veterans on the campus did not stage this strike. It is a student body program, endorsed by veterans and non-veterans alike, in the interests of fair play and the practice of democracy which is taught."

One student declared, "I've learned more in two days than I have been taught here in a whole semester."

Another spokesman declared, "We must remember we are college students, attending an American school in a free country. We must remain firm in our decision to get our two classmates back in school, but must permit or tolerate no violence or disorder. We must conduct ourselves as American college students should."

Students last night adopted a policy of parading before campus buildings displaying placards, but agreed no one would be stopped from entering or leaving buildings. They agreed there would be no disorder and that their demonstrations should remain peaceful.

It was also decided that in the event an attoreny is needed, a Cumberland, Md., lawyer will be engaged to represent them. In the meantime, it was learned several Keyser lawyers, some former students, have offered assistance and are guiding the students behind the scenes.

Before last night's meeting was adjourned, students agreed that a statement will be perepared for submitting to the school officials. In addition to demands that the two dismissed students be reinstated, the students will demand excused absences for time lost during the strike.

It was voted to continue the strike at 7:30 a. m. today and to hold another mass meeting this evening. In addition to pickets at the administration building, placards will also be displayed at the Music Hall on Mineral Street today.

Miss Christopher left school last Friday, after her mother came for her ,and Cotrill, who resided in the veterans' section on "Arcadia Heights" left last night.

Yesterday, only a handful of students attended classes, and spokesmen at the students' mass meeting last night declared these students were in classes because they are employed on the campus and are "working their way through school." They have been advised they will lose their jobs if they join the strike, the student body was told.

The students voted to permit these "working students," numbering 15 or 20, to attend classes so they can retain their jobs, and extended them a vote of confidence and consider them a part of the striking student body.

Man Is Arrested

Edward Dalbaugh, 433 Baltimore Avenue, is being held in city jail after being apprehended by City Police last night on a drunk and disorderly charge.

River Rises To Within One Foot Of Flood Stage As Rainfall Hits Close To Three Inch Mark In City

Wills Creek Reported Remaining Stationary

Residents and business houses in Cumberland flood zones were generally alarmed late last night as the Potomac River approached flood stage following two days of heavy rainfall, which brought the stream from its five-foot normal level to 16 feet at 10 p. m. This is one foot below flood stage.

The Weather Bureau said, however, Cumberland probably would escape flood waters, but despite this there was general concern and many people watched the river and Wills Creek from banks and bridges. The News office was swamped with telephone calls seeking information. City Police also received scores of calls.

Since Monday at 1:30 a. m., official reports show 2.88 inches of rain fell in the city up until midnight last night. The rainfall was general in the Upper Potomac River and Wills Creek basins, and ground became sodden with water, causing a quick run-off into streams.

Yesterday morning the river was reported at 12.26, but continued rainfall caused a steady rise in the stream. At 7 p. m. yesterday it was reported at 15.30 feet and at 10 p. m. had gone up to 16 feet. Flood stage at the Wiley Ford bridge where the official guage is stationed is 17 feet.

Rainfall Stops Here

During the afternoon here rainfall ceased, and skies appeared to be clearing; however, there were showers later in the night.

Weather observers said local rainfall has little to do with creating local floods and it is the rainfall up stream which causes real concern. Rain was reported in some sections up the Potomac after dark.

At the Hyndman tower of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, Wills Creek was reported at 6 feet 2 inches at 11 p. m. The creek had apparently stopped rising there, and no rain other than mist had fallen since 5 p. m.

The creek was out of its banks between the Hyndman tower and Cook's Mills, about 10 miles from Cumberland. Water flowed over "the creek road" between the tower and Cook's Mills yesterday afternoon and the school bus had trouble getting through.

At Oldtown, water was over the toll bridge on the road to Green Spring, and the river was backing over fields, with one street reported flooded.

At points along the Potomac above Cumberland, periodic checks were made and at midnight the river seemed to be dropping slightly at Kitzmiller and Luke. This would indicate a recession here by this morning, officials said, unless there was more rainfall.

The United States Weather Bureau notified Ralph L. Rizer, city engineer, late yesterday afternoon that the river should reach its crest of 15 to 16 feet here by 7 p. m. last night. However the 16-foot mark was not reached until after 10 p. m.

On the strength of this report and the fact Wills Creek had been stationary for three hours, Rizer called in his observers on various stream guages at 5 p. m. He said if there was further danger, or additional heavy rainfall he would again call them out to man the guages, so an alarm could be spread if flood threatened.

Many Calls Received

During the day, Rizer's office received at least 50 calls asking about flood danger. Most of these calls came from residents of the North Mechanic and North Centre Street sections.

Because of flood rumors, a kindergarten on North Centre Street was dismissed at 1 p. m. yesterday.

Last night, while the concern was general in downtown Cumberland, it was not possible to make any reasonable prediction here. There was still some rainfall in Garrett County, and skies remained overcast. Many merchants and downtown residents remained at their places until early morning hours, checking the situation. Many moved perishable goods atop tables, counters, etc.

Mrs. Edith Pew, Kitzmiller tax collector, volunteered yesterday to act as stream gauge observer in that section for the first time, and called Rizer's office every hour from 10 a. m. until 4 p. m. to report on the rise in the Potomac.

Rizer's office had called Former Mayor Leslie Sharpless of Kitzmiller, the regular observer, to check the river today, but he recommended Mrs. Pew because it would be inconvenient for him to visit the stream gauge regularly.

When she made her last call at 4 p. m., Mrs. Pew reported that the Kitzmiller gauge stood at 6.6 feet. Flood stage at that point is 14 feet. She said the river had been stationary since 2 p. m.

Mrs. Pew said her home is located about three feet from the river bank, near the stream gauge. Asked whether she was worried about the rising water, she said her family never started worrying until the water started "coming over the wall" along the river bank.

Estimated Water's Height

Two members of the city engineering crew were stationed at the Hyndman gauge on Wills Creek during the day. At 4 p. m. they reported the creek had been stationary at 5.8 feet for one hour. The water was not even up to the official gauge, and they had to estimate the height of the water.

Two other men of the city engineering crew checked the four city gauges during the day at Blue Bridge on Johnson Street, Market Street, Baltimore Street and the Narrows. They reported at 5 p. m. that Wills Creek at Market Street had remained stationary from 2 to 3 p. m. following a slow rise during the day, and had then risen 1/10 of a foot to reach a crest of 17.9. Flood stage at that point is about 23 feet.

Continuous rains since Sunday caused high waters in Georges Creek and its tributaries in Lonaconing.

RIVER RISES-- Robert R. Golden, local weather observer, is shown here as he checked the stream gauge at Wiley Ford bridge last night when the Potomac River neared flood stage. Normally, Golden makes a check of the stream each morning at 8 a. m., but when it is raining, he is required to make a check each six hours. Yesterday, with the stream rising steadily, he made hourly checks and at midnight declared he was getting a little tired, since he had but five hours sleep since Sunday night. Flood stage at the Wiley Ford gauge is 17 feet. The gauge at last night's 10 p. m. reading showed 16 feet.

Community Super Market Workers Win Wage Boosts

Firm Signs Contract With Two AFL Unions

The Community Super Market, 30 Wineow Street, has signed a union agreement which provides increases of about $6 a week for employes, according to a joint statement issued yesterday by Local 322, Meat Cutters Union, and Local 886, Retail Clerks Union, both AFL.

The wage boosts were retroactive to March 13 for the Meat Cutters Union members and March 27 for workers represented by the Clerks Union.

Other benefits provided in the contract were listed as a reduction in the work week from 51½ to 45 hours a week, six paid holidays and paid vacations.

The agreement also includes a Union Shop clause in which new workers become members of the union after 30 days employment.

William C. Walsh, local attorney, represented the firm in the contract negotiations. The Meat Cutters Union was represented by William Krapf, president, and Mike Roth, international representative, while the Retail Clerks were represented by J. T. Defibaugh, business agent for Local 886, and C. E. Stutzman, president of the Allegany Trades Council.

The unions also hold contracts with the A. and P. Super Market and units of the American Stores, Inc., of the Cumberland area.

Police To Patrol Bedford Road Area

A crack-down to compel motorists to obey the 40 mile-an-hour speed limit on Bedford Road from Cumberland to the Pennsylvania State Line was ordered yesterday by First Sgt. W. E. O'Hara, commander of the LaVale barracks of the Maryland State Police.

Sgt. O'Hara said numerous complaints have been received from residents of that section during the past week concerning illegal speeding by motorists, and explained the 40 mile-an-hour limit has been in force in that section for the past year.

Special State Police patrols will be assigned to the Bedford Road sections, according to the sergeant, and offenders will be taken to court for trial if troopers find it necessary to stop them for speeding.

The 40 mile limit was put into effect because of the dangerous curves and bad stretches of road, according to Sgt. O'Hara, who said enforcement of the limitation will become rigid immediately.

First Radio Broadcast Here 20 Years Ago

Twenty years ago this month the first broadcasting station to operate in Cumberland was sponsored by the old Cumberland Daily News and broadcast for three weeks, from the stage of the Liberty Theater.

The station, using the call letters WKBT, was operated here by Sidney Shepherd, who later took the equipment to Frostburg and thence to Pittsburgh. The first three people to broadcast from Cumberland were the late Thomas W. Koon, then mayor of the city; Thomas H. Burke, who operated the Liberty, and Ross Shaw, Oldtown, who served as announcer and master of ceremonies.

The Weather

With a flood looking possible, more rain is predicted for this morning, but the official weather bureau says "no flood."

It is hoped they know what they are talking about. The lady of the house is still trying to get her Monday washing done, but has almost given up until next week. The sun managed to creep through Tuesday to eke out a high of 47 degrees, but didn't have to go far, since the law was recorded at 45 degrees. The temperature at 10:30 last night was 43 degrees. The rainfall was .41 inches while a reading of 2.88 inches since Monday at 1:30 a. m. was recorded.

ACCUSED—Shown above in the County Jail, where he is awaiting action of the April grand jury, is Edgar W. Bryner, 20-year-old LaVale soldier accused of the blackjack assault of Mrs. Helen Stark, operator of a drug store at the corner of Knox and Centre Streets, in the store last Thursday. The State Attorney's office said yesterday the case will be presented to the grand jury on Thursday.

Class Is Planned For Lay Workers

A class for lay public health workers will be held Thursday at 1:30 p. m. in the Health Department clinic rooms at City Hall, according to Mrs. Arthur Evans, chairman of the Allegany County Lay Health Council.

Mrs. Evans announced at a meeting of the council last night at City Hall that Mrs. George Henderson, a graduate of the Johns Hopkins Hospital School of Nursing, will be the instructor.

Instructions will be given in taking temperature, pulse and respiration readings.

Last night's program was planned in observance of National Public Health Nurse Week. Mrs. Evans pointed out that 7,000 additional public health nurses are needed throughout the country, urging council members to aid in the campaign to interest young women in that career.

Mrs. Grace Wallace, Fayette Street, was appointed treasurer to succeed Lester Kolb, Flintstone, who resigned because of ill health.

The principal speaker was Dr. Clarence Velat, officer in charge of the United States Health Service nutrition unit which is completing a two-year survey in local elementary schools.

Dr. Velat pointed out that only since 1930 has nutrition become a science, stating that nutrition concerns not only the type of foods in the diet but also what happens to foods in the body.

He stressed the importance of nutrition in pre-natal care, and concluded with a brief discussion of the loss of some beneficial qualities in natural food products, such as fresh milk and wheat, by present purification methods.

Dr. Velat showed a number of color slides, some of them taken in the local survey, illustrating various signs of malnutrition.

Two Receive Treatment For Minor Injuries

Two emergency cases were handled Tuesday by Memorial Hospital, one of which was a four-year-old boy, Richard Keller, who fell on a piece of glass at his home, 212 Spring Street.

The other case was John Cranor, 443 Columbia Street, a salesman at Sears Roebuck, who caught his finger in an air compressor. Both were treated and sent home.

Few Maryland Miners Expected To Work Today

Ocean Mine Flooded By Heavy Rainfall

Few of Maryland's 2,000 miners returned to work yesterday and there was little indication that production would be resumed to any extent today, coal operators, union officials and railroad spokesmen said last night.

In the Georges Creek Coal Region, a few miners reported at several pits, but when no one else appeared to work, they returned to their homes.

The Campbell Coal Company mines at Barton and Mill Run reported last night that some of their men worked yesterday, and the Masteller Coal Company mines at Hampshire, W. Va., also operated.

The Georges Creek Coal Company and Consolidated Fuel Company Mines in the Lonaconing and Frostburg areas were still idle. The mine at Ocean was reported flooded due to the heavy rainfall, and it will be several days before work can be resumed there, miners said. Georges Creek Coal Company officials here last night said their mines at Logan, W. Va., resumed operations yesterday morning on a full scale.

Thomas Mines Working

In the Upper Potomac Region, no one appeared to be working, railroad officials said, except at Thomas, W. Va. All mines east of Thomas remained idle. It has been expected that mines at Kitzmiller, Vindex, Shallmar, Kempton and that general area in Garrett County might resume today, but late last night officials said, "We don't know what to expect, but it looks as if the miners are still waiting."

All strip mines in this general area were idle yesterday due to the heavy rainfall. Most of these operations are reported flooded so badly they won't work for a couple of days.

In nearby West Virginia and Pennsylvania fields, a number of mines were working yesterday on a nearly full scale basis. However, railroad officials here last night declared, "We don't expect any full scale coal movement before the first of the week."

Heavy rains throughout the area may have kept some men from returning to the pits, but it was generally believed that the miners were merely waiting until after the contempt of court trial of John L. Lewis, UMW president, today.

A couple of mine locals in the area voted to stay away from the mines until after an inspection had been made, but mine operators believe this was something of a "delaying action." In some quarters, some miners have declared frankly they won't work until after they see how Lewis fares in court.

The agreement on miners' pensions which officially ended the "voluntary" walkout, brought rays of hope to furloughed railroaders and furloughed workers of other industries made idle by the cessation of coal production and the resultant coal shortage.

Rail Curtailment Cancelled

A second 25 per cent curtailment in the operation of coal-powered trains, which was to become effective April 15, by governmental decree, was cancelled yesterday at 4 p. m., local railroad officials said.

This means that a 15 per cent freight train traffic curtailment on the local division of the Baltimore and Ohio will not be made and Trains Nos. 32 and 15 which were to be suspended will continue.

On the Western Maryland, there will be no interruption in fast freight service, and Trains Nos. 1 and 4 between Cumberland and Elkins, will resume operations today. Train No. 1 leaves Cumberland at 7:05 a. m., arriving at Elkins at 11 a. m. Train No. 4 leaves Elkins at 1:55 p. m. and arrives here at 5:55 p. m.

Baltimore and Ohio Railroad officials in Baltimore said the 15,000 workers who were furloughed will be called back to work starting today, as each train is put on its run again.

Local Stockyards Report Light Run

A light run but a high market was reported in operations of the Cumberland Stock Yards, Inc., yesterday. The report follows:

Good butcher heifers 23-24½; butcher heiferettes 20-22 cents; good butcher cows 20-24; medium cows 17-19 cents; shelly kind 15-17.

Milk cows $125 to $150 a head; good veal calves 30-35 cents; medium calves 26-29 cents; light calves 18-22; good hogs 22½-23½; light hogs 20-21½; stag hogs 15-16 cents. Good chickens 38-40½; Leghorn chickens 28-35 cents.

Two Motorists Fined

Herbert P. Cessna, 11 Water Street, and Raymond F. Zegles, 319 Bedford Street, were fined $5 each Tuesday in Police Court on careless driving charges resulting from an automobile collision on Centre and Franklin Streets early Tuesday morning.

Condition Unchanged

Clarence R. Jones, 504 Avirett Avenue, who has been a patient in Allegany Hospital for the past two weeks, remains unchanged.

Out-Patient Medical Treatment Given Approximately 9,000 Vets

Approximately 9,000 out-patient medical treatments were given by the medical clinic of the local Regional VA Office to State veterans during the first three months of this year, it was disclosed last night by W. L. Limburg, VA's regional manager in Maryland.

The VA official added that this service is averaging slightly more than for the same months last year. A total of 35,300 treatments were performed in 1947.

This medical activity consists of medical and surgical treatments for eligible veterans with ailments incurred or aggravated while they were in military service. The figures cited for last year and the first three months of 1948 do not include thousands of physical examinations given to determine the need for out-patient treatment, for pension and compensation purposes and for other reasons.

Out-patient care is available in most cases, only for veterans having service-connected or service-aggravated ailments, declared Limburg.

While clinics in VA offices account for a large percentage of the out-patient treatments given, many ex-servicemen and women receive such care from private physicians, hospitals, and clinics under contract to VA where VA facilities are not available. However, this contract care must, without exception, receive the prior approval of the Veterans Administration.

Veterans Administration May Investigate Dispute

Rizer To Estimate Cost Of Piping

City officials conferred yesterday with a representative of the Refinite Corporation, Omaha, Neb., regarding installation problems involved in providing a circulating, filtering and sterilizing system at the Constitution Park swimming pool.

Refinite submitted the low bids for two types of systems, the diatomaceous earth and pressure filters, bidding $13,423 and $17,304 respectively.

City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer pointed out that although no swimming pools in Maryland are served by diatomaceous earth filters at the present time, cities in other states which use that system will be contacted for information regarding its effectiveness as compared to the conventional type of pressure filter.

Other companies which have submitted bids are the Permutit Company, Providence, R. I., bidding $21,400 for installation of the pressure filter system, and Proportioneer, Inc., Providence, R. I., which bid $18,173.40 for installing the diatomaceous earth type.

Officials emphasized, however, that the city is not obligated to accept the lowest bid, and that the Mayor and Council will collect more data regarding the two systems before letting the contract.

The Refinite representative, George Cunney, Washington, D. C., district manager for Maryland and Virginia, said if his company is awarded the contract it will be five weeks before the necessary equipment can be brought here, with the actual installation expected to take about two weeks.

Installation would be handled by Water Department plumbers under the supervision of the successful bidder.

Rizer was instructed to estimate the cost of the necessary piping which would be installed around the pool.

Officials said it has not yet been decided whether to open the pool as usual on Memorial Day if the filtration system has not been installed by that time.

Besides Mayor Thomas S. Post and Rizer, others attending the conference were Street Commissioner Edgar Reynolds, who with Mayor Post is a member of the Park Board; Water Commissioner William J. Edwards and W. Arnold Gunther, state bacteriologist, who was invited to attend to discuss questions of water analysis.

VA Officer To Meet With Students Today

The Veterans Administration has indicated it will investigate the dispute between striking students and school officials at Potomac State School, Keyser, W. Va., and members of veteran organizations pledged their support of the students' protest, it was revealed at a meeting of over 300 members of the student body last night.

Students staged a strike yesterday in protest of the dismissal from school of Dortha Christopher, 18, Kingwood, W. Va., freshman, and Gene Cotrill, 25, Bridgeport, W. Va., sophomore, a veteran enrolled under the GI Bill of Rights. The pair was accused of staying out together all nibht in violation of the school's rules regarding resident students.

At the mass meeting it was charged school officials had failed to dismiss a girl student last year for a much more serious offense, when some students thought she should be dismissed. The students claim the school executives are now unfair, since the pair involved in this dispute can prove their innocence of any moral misconduct, but were not given an opportunity.

A committee of six students appealed to Dr. E. E. Church, president, and other school officials to have the two students reinstated. A petition bearing the names of over 300 students was also sent the executive board, but the boy and girl were asked to leave the campus.

VFW Commander Speaks

One of the principal speakers at the students' rally last night was Charles Bolyard, a former student, and now commander of Queens Point Memorial Post No. 6775, Veterans of Foreign Wars, McCoole.

Commander Bolyard told the students the VFW post is 100 per cent behind the students in this action and will support them in every way possible. He said the Veterans Administration will be urged to investigate this and other situations at the school, and expressed the opinion other veterans organizations will be interested in the students' problem.

Everett Gibbs, Veterans Administration officer of the Keyser office, asked the students to meet with him in the school's auditorium at 9 a. m. today.

The students said they will meet with Gibbs, but will not meet inside the auditorium. They offered to meet him outside, and Gibbs indicated he will be on hand.

This was consistent with the students' action yesterday when Vernon E. Rankin, Mineral County prosecutor, appeared and asked the students to go into the assembly hall. They refused and Rankin produced a law book and read:

"Any person, or persons, who willfully interrupt molest or disturb, any free school or other school," are subject to prosecution. Rankin said fine upon conviction is $10 to $50 along with possible jail sentence of 30 days for each offense.

Rankin said he had been called to the school by school authorities, as prosecuting attorney for the county and not as attorney for the school. He said if there are violations, or if formal complaints are made, he will take necessary action to prosecute.

Want No Disorder

Among the students who spoke at the rally were several who emphasized the point that "this is not a veterans battle, and the veterans on the campus did not stage this strike. It is a student body program, endorsed by veterans and non-veterans alike, in the interests of fair play and the practice of democracy which is taught."

One student declared, "I've learned more in two days than I have been taught here in a whole semester."

Another spokesman declared, "We must remember we are college students, attending an American school in a free country. We must remain firm in our decision to get our two classmates back in school, but must permit or tolerate no violence or disorder. We must conduct ourselves as American college students should."

Students last night adopted a policy of parading before campus buildings displaying placards, but agreed no one would be stopped from entering or leaving buildings. They agreed there would be no disorder and that their demonstrations should remain peaceful.

It was also decided that in the event an attoreny is needed, a Cumberland, Md., lawyer will be engaged to represent them. In the meantime, it was learned several Keyser lawyers, some former students, have offered assistance and are guiding the students behind the scenes.

Before last night's meeting was adjourned, students agreed that a statement will be perepared for submitting to the school officials. In addition to demands that the two dismissed students be reinstated, the students will demand excused absences for time lost during the strike.

It was voted to continue the strike at 7:30 a. m. today and to hold another mass meeting this evening. In addition to pickets at the administration building, placards will also be displayed at the Music Hall on Mineral Street today.

Miss Christopher left school last Friday, after her mother came for her ,and Cotrill, who resided in the veterans' section on "Arcadia Heights" left last night.

Yesterday, only a handful of students attended classes, and spokesmen at the students' mass meeting last night declared these students were in classes because they are employed on the campus and are "working their way through school." They have been advised they will lose their jobs if they join the strike, the student body was told.

The students voted to permit these "working students," numbering 15 or 20, to attend classes so they can retain their jobs, and extended them a vote of confidence and consider them a part of the striking student body.

Man Is Arrested

Edward Dalbaugh, 433 Baltimore Avenue, is being held in city jail after being apprehended by City Police last night on a drunk and disorderly charge.
